Is this trip Necessary?

Bus lines today are crowded beyond capacity. Many passengers are war workers and members of our armed forces. But many more are civilian travelers whose trips are not always necessary.

Because of this crowded condition, many people whose travel is vital to our war effort are often delayed. Our equipment has a definite capacity. We can handle so many passengers and no more.

Our service men and war workers must travel, so we ask you to take only trips that are necessary—travel in the middle of the week—get information and tickets in advance, and carry a minimum of baggage.

We know you will gladly curb your trips in order that vital bus travel may be undisturbed. With your help, we can continue to handle the traffic that is urgent for winning the war.
