

NEXT WEEK AT

TALK OF THE TOWN PLAYS AT IMPERIAL

Comedy makes "The Talk of the Town" sparkle through 118 minutes at the Imperial Theatre when it will be shown there on Sunday-only of next week. The leading roles are enacted by Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman. It has been shown in the city previously, but should be well enjoyed by all who have not seen it previously, and it is our venture many will want to avail themselves of this opportunity to see it again. It is at least welcome for its laughter and complete detachment from wartime problems.

Judy Garland and George Murphy cavort across the Imperial screen in the new film "For Me and My Gal," reviewed on the opposite page, which is the Monday-Tuesday attraction at the uptown house next week.

Don "Red" Barry and Jean Parker are co-starred in the film "The Traitor Within," which will be shown on Wednesday-only at the Imperial. It is a picture that deals mostly with life in a small California town.

Ralph Morgan plays the part of the town's mayor. Parker's father is a veteran of World War I who believes that Morgan took credit during the War for the capture of some German prisoners, although Parker's father actually captured them.

Barry's trucking business is ruined when his only truck is in an accident. He goes to Morgan to ask for a new truck and threatens to reveal the location of several men who know the real story behind Morgan's World War I "capture." Rather than face a scandal, Morgan gives Barry a new truck, and Barry and Miss Parker get married. Then racketeers learn about Morgan's "secret" and start to move in on the town. Barry becomes rich.

The showdown in the plot comes when Morgan is found dead. The blame is placed on Barry, and he is jailed. The townspeople want to get at Barry, and there is plenty of suspense until Morgan's wife shows up with a letter written by Morgan prior to his death. The letter clears up the entire mess. The racketeers are put in the jail, and Barry and Miss Parker and her dad are reunited again.

"Sin Town," an outdoor action special, is laid against the background of an oil boom town, with the forces of law and order vying with those of crime. There is plenty doing for the action fans when this film will be shown next Thursday-Friday at the Imperial. The film features Constance Bennett and Brod Crawford in the role of a confidence team which preys on the gullibles of the early West, and who in turn are taken themselves, both in money and love.

The romantic and business partnership of the starring duo is broken up temporarily when Crawford decides to go "legitimate" and settle down with the daughter of a newspaper editor who had been slain by the town's criminal lieutenant. Used by the town gang's head as a dupe, the confidence man learns in time of the crimes committed in his name.

Cast support includes Anne Gwynne, Patric Knowles, Andy Devine, Leo Carillo, Ward Bond, Arthur Aylesworth, Ralf Harold, Charles Wagenheim, Billy Wayne, Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, and Jack Mulhall.

Johnny Mack Brown is featured in "Tenting On the Old Camp Ground" for the Saturday-only, western opus on next week's Imperial program, with the latest chapter of "King of the Mounties" thrown in for good measure.

Urise Tritt Is Graduate Naval Training School

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 31 — Urise R. Tritt, 21, son of Mrs. U. R. Tritt of Roanoke Rapids, was graduated from the U. S. Naval Training School for signalmen at the University of Illinois here today with the recommendation that he be advanced to the petty officer rating of signalman, third class. Only 78 out of the class of 169 received this honor. He now awaits assignment to active duty with the fleet or to a Naval shore station.

Tritt was selected to attend the school through a series of tests taken while in recruit training in which he displayed an aptitude for this type of work. The 16-week course included instruction in sending and receiving International code by blinker, searchlight, and semaphore, taking and receiving flag signals, and identifying storm warning and distress signals.

Several hundred officers and men are being trained in the three schools for Navy specialists on the campus here. The other two are diesel schools, one for officers, and one for enlisted men.
