Farm Security Bldg. In Halifax Burned Feb. 25th

Fire which broke out in the basement of the main office building of the Farm Security Administration near Halifax Friday morning did approximately $2,000 worth of damage to the building and $800 damage to the equipment, according to reports made by the heads of the administration. The fire was caused from a short circuit.

Lemel DeBerry, one of the workers at the Administration building was overcome by the fumes and smoke while attempting to fight the fire.

The Halifax Fire Department handled the job expertly, lacking the necessary gas masks and equipment which is necessary to combat a fire like this one, it has been reported. They were aided in their fight by the Enfield and Roanoke Rapids Fire Departments.

Some damage was reported to have been done by persons who obviously were intending to help by snatching telephones from the walls and breaking out window glasses for the purpose of saving various objects.

Machinery Repair Class Started At Aurelian Springs

A defense project, a class in farm machinery repair, was organized in the new shop at Aurelian Springs School on Monday night of this week. Fourteen men and boys were present for the first class.

The class is under the supervision of Raymond F. Shearin, agriculture teacher of the school. Leonard Hockaday will act as instructor. They will concentrate largely on the construction of farm implements of wood and the repairing of farm machinery. Several hundred dollars worth of tools have been approved for the course by the Federal Government.

Among the larger tools that have been received by the school are an electric welder and a forge. An electric drill press and a powered grinder are expected soon. Among the small tools that have been received are dies, wrenches, chisels and hammers.

The school is interested in teaching the farmers in the community to use these machines and tools in order for them to save money and time in the repair of their farm equipment. When the men learn to use the equipment in the shop, they will be allowed to bring their implements to the shop and repair them without charge.

J. D. Hatsoe of Weldon has been stationed with the Army at Miami Beach, Fla.
