

ROD & GUN

By GENE WIKE
(N. C. Division of Game and Inland Fisheries)

THEY'RE ALL SET —

In preparation for what should be North Carolina's biggest hunting season, from the standpoint of numbers of sportsmen going out, the law enforcement section of the Division of Game and Inland Fisheries is at full strength, and now is better staffed than at any previous time.

Addition of seven district fish and game protectors during the past few weeks has brought the force up to the full complement of 96, according to C. D. Kirkpatrick, chief of law enforcement. These 96 men work under supervisors for the five divisions into which the State is divided for enforcement work: Tom L. Rollins of Asheville, Robert F. Logan of Statesville, J. Harold King of Smithfield, E. P. Keen of Kenly, and E. L. Nicholson of Burgaw.

The seven new protectors are W. B. Cope, Sylva; J. S. Guffey, Bessemer City; H. A. Robertson, Statesville; A. D. Pridgen, Macon, Rt. 2; Belton Buchanan, Broadway; James A. Vinson, Hertford County; and Hugh G. Rowe, Washington, N. C.

Another addition to protection forces is Archie Rivenbark of Burgaw, who went on the job last week as refuge protector for the Holly Shelter Wildlife Management Area, Pender County.

IT'S A FREE COUNTRY —

One entrant among the first week's winners in the Southeastern North Carolina Beach Association's $2000 Fall Fishing Rodeo at Wilmington furnishes proof that there's room for everybody in the act.

He's six-year old Benny Adams of Chester, Pa., who in open competition walked off with a prize of five silver dollars for the best catfish catch — an entry measuring 18 1/4 inches and weighing two pounds.

Women aren't taking a back seat either. Mrs. R. B. Shepard of Wilmington, also in open competition, entered the first week's best spot — an 11-incher. In a special women's event — for the largest fish caught by a woman contestant in the opening week, Mrs. C. M. Park of Wilmington took the honors, with a 16-inch, 22-ounce bluefish.

FIRST SAILFISH —

After a dry spell in the early stages during which anglers seeking sailfish could report only that three were hooked but got away, a Wilmingtonian came up with the first entry in that class.

The trick was turned by Thomas B. Williams, who won a tussle with a six foot, six-and a half inch specimen while fishing from Capt. Billy Decover's Jim Jam.

OTHER WINNERS —

Prizes in 15 other classes for the first week were given to the following:

Amberjack — George West, Wilmington, 42 1/2 in., 27 lbs., 10 oz.; blue — R. S. Johnson, Wilmington, 18 1/4 in., 2 lbs.; bonito — R. E. Bruce, Wilmington, 41 in., 10 lb., 6 oz.; dolphin — George West, Wilmington, 34 1/4 in., 7 lbs.; black drum — Fred Sternberger, Wilmington, 14 1-2 in., 13/4 lbs.; channel bass — R. P. Ellis, Morresville, 25 3/4 in. 6 1/2 lbs.; flounder — Liston King, Wilmington, 23 in., 5 lbs.; King mackerel — Raiford Trask, Wrightsville Beach, 33 in. 7 lbs.

Horse mackerel (cero) — P. M. Ross, Charlotte, 24 1/2 in., 7 lbs., 1 oz.; Spanish mackerel — John M. Stevens, Wilmington, 24 in., 3 lbs.; Virginia mullet — C. H. Thornton, Salisbury, 1 in., 1 lb.; 12 oz.; piglish — Lloyd Elliott, Wilmington, 11 1/2 in., 14 oz.; pompano — Dr. A. H. Hayes, Fairmont, 17 in., 3 lbs.; trout (weak-fish) — Lloyd L. Helms, Monroe, 25 in., 5 lbs.; sheephead — Horace Pearsall, Wilmington, 6 lbs., 3 oz.

REALLY ROLLING —

Word from Ken Noble is that competition is hot and heavy in the rodeo. The promise of good catches that was held out by results of the first several days has paid off for entrants from practically all the southeastern Atlantic states, he says. The opening week drew more than 250 entrants.

The rodeo will continue through the month of September. There are weekly cash and equipment prizes and grand prizes will be awarded at the end of the event.
