Minister Tells Parents of Sacred Responsibility In Home At Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary

The Rev. W. R. Stevens, pastor of Rosemary Methodist Church, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church Tuesday night. The pastor spoke on "Keeping a Proper Balance in the Home."

The address was directed to parents in the audience. Theme of the talk was based on the premise that the most sacred responsibility parents have is exerting the right influences on their children.

"Before children can receive the best discipline," the Rev. Mr. Stevens said, "parents must have self-discipline."

In his talk he listed the ten needs of children. First need, he brought out, is for them to have a well adjusted home. Then they must be understood, he said.

Proper discipline, directed in the right channels, he gave as the third need. Next he listed play. Fifth need, he said, is work or a feeling of responsibility.

Friends or a spirit of friendliness, he said was another important need of the child. Culture, a proper coordinating of behavior, he gave as the seventh need.

Recognition and a feeling of the importance of each parent in the home, with neither parent having the sole responsibility. The Rev. Mr. Stevens brought out as another important need. Then a recognition of each member of the family, each child as having an equal place in the home, he said was a very important need.

Finally, the minister said, the home should be where the best front is put forward at all times. Children should not be treated differently outside of the home than they are at home.

Emphasizing his last point, the minister concluded his remarks by saying, "The home should be a demonstration center of the society that we should live to have."

The minister gave the devotional before beginning his talk. Following the address, a business meeting was held.

Favorite Recipes

Frozen salads continue to hold their own among the favorite recipes of local good cooks. Mrs. George Pappendick of Monroe Street has not only sent in a palpitating salad recipe, but also a suggested luncheon menu and dessert that goes right along with it. Her son, George, thinks there is nothing better than his mom's gingerbread. When a member of your own family adds his votes to a recipe that's as good a test as any for judging its success, don't you agree?

Frozen Fruit Salad
1 large can fruit cocktail
1 large can sliced pineapple—diced
3 sliced bananas
1 package chopped dates
1 medium sized package of marshmallows cut in small pieces
1 cup cream
1/2 cup mayonnaise
Mix the first five ingredients together. Then add cream, which has been whipped and mixed, with mayonnaise, mixing together thoroughly. Pour into refrigerator trays and set control to "freeze" until salad is frozen. Makes two large trays. This salad is nice served on lettuce with cheese straws or hot cheese biscuits.

Suggested Luncheon Menu
Frozen fruit salad on lettuce
Slice of your favorite cold meat
Potato chips
Hot rolls
Iced tea

Gingerbread
1/2 cup butter or oleomargarine
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup molasses
1 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup boiling water
Ground ginger and allspice
Cream butter and sugra together. Add egg, mixing thoroughly. Next add molasses, flour and dash of salt. Mix soda and boiling water together. Stir into batter. Last, add the ginger and allspice according to taste. Bake in a well greased pan at 350 degrees until done. Takes about 20 to 30 minutes. Makes about nine servings. This recipe can be doubled for larger amount. It is delicious served warm with sliced bananas and whipped cream or your favorite sauce, as an individual dessert
