Thousands Go To Carnival

The 16th edition of the Greensboro Youth Council Carnival is underway at the Greensboro Coliseum Complex. The carnival, which will be open through Sunday, April 30, features the James H. Drew Rides, 21 area youth organizations, game booths, numerous and various contests, exhibits, and displays, including the basketball great Phil Ford.

The carnival is an annual GYC project which was started to help school service clubs raise money by manning game booths on the midway. Five Grimsley organizations were selected as finalists in the booth competition. Participating as booth operators are the Exchangettes, the Jaycettes, the Key Club, the O'Henry Juniors, and Grimsley Torchlight.

Phil Ford of UNC, will be at the Carnival much of Sunday.

Dudley junior Jerry Albanese is Chairman of GYC Carnival. Kath Kelley, a Grimsley junior, is assistant chairman.

Many activities have been planned for the nights of the carnival, especially in the Carnival Club area of the Exhibition Area. On Wednesday night a group from the Cole Porter Revue performed. The School Bank Playoffs took place Thursday night. Discos will be held Friday and Saturday nights. The annual Battle of the Bands will be from 1:00 until 7:00 Saturday. For country music fans, there will be a Shindig Sunday afternoon.

There will be clown, balloon sellers, souvenir sellers, and picture takers on the loose all five days.

The Youth Council began preparations over 6 months ago for this years Carnival. The 1978 edition of the GYC Carnival is "shaping up into the best ever" according to one person on the carnival staff.

Come out and support the Grimsley clubs and the Greensboro Youth Council at the carnival this weekend.

Wedding Ceremony Held On Campus

The class entitled Interpersonal Relationships has been busily lately with a mock wedding. Both first and second period classes scheduled weddings for April 14. This is a yearly event which helps students to understand how the average wedding is conducted.

In the first wedding, Diane Swan was the bride and Trip Streuli was the groom. Brenda Summers was the maid of honor, with Tobi Arledge, Helene Bialek, Donna Hough, Pam Lawson, and Theresa Love as bridesmaids. The ushers in this first period wedding were Tim Leitner, Steve Flynn, Ray Essa, and Doug Stover. The best man was Chuck Jones, and the clergyman was Tony Steele.

In the second wedding the bride was Cheryl Buffington, and the groom was Ashley Apple. The clergyman was Chuck Fesmire. The maid of honor was Auria Green, and the bride's maids were: Tracey Wenner, Terry Mc-

Cormack, Janice Hall, and Lynn Stancil. The ushers in this mock wedding were Tommy Few, Charlie Shoffner, Mike Moore, Eric James. The best man was Peter Gratale.

Through the use of mock weddings students which take this course can understand the duties and responsibilities of each specific member of a wedding. They learn what promises will be needed and what real love means. Etiquette for contemporary society is stressed along with how to behave at a reception.

Every student has some type of responsibility, whether it be direct, as the bride or groom are, or simply as the mother or father of the bride. The class fee takes care of the cost of food for the reception. The tuxedos were provided by Formal Wear, and the bride's dress was provided by Belk.

The Interpersonal Relationships class is a one semester elective for seniors. It helps them understand themselves and others. Dating, love, engagement, and the wedding itself are discussed at length.

Sportscaster Advises English Students

Recently, Charlie Harville has visited Mrs. Hoffer's English classes, answering many questions asked by students.

Having worked at Channel 8 from 1974 through 1975, after which he worked on a book encompassing the record of sports in North Carolina, he is presently the sportscaster for Channel 2 News.

Charlie Harville has covered everything excluding hunting and fishing in North Carolina. His book contains every major sport in North Carolina. Several times he had to go to the World Almanac in order to determine which schools had major sports programs. He had to maintain a schedule which included ten hours a day for one year devoted on his book.

The English classes could understand the job of writing a book or a paper much better after Charlie Harville had talked to them about the "long and tedious job" of writing. It was understood that a goal must be set before any assignment can be finished. Charlie "wrote the book so that those interested in sports could use it to discover things they didn't know before. . . to furnish information and entertain the reader."

Other questions were answered by the author and sportscaster. When asked what the future of the GGO is, he said: "I don't think the date of the GGO ought to be changed. The GGO needs a director to work on the golfing tournament all year. The Jaycees don't provide the continuous steering all year round." He also said that Forest Oaks is more difficult than Sedgewood, due to lack of space for spectators.

He said that North Carolina has one of the best women's basketball programs. When asked who the greatest athlete he ever saw was he said it was Ace Parker, from Norfolk, Va.

Charlie Harville majored in English at High Point College, and studied English and literature "because I enjoyed it. . . I deplore the fact that so many people today can read or write so well." He also added that he isn't a journalist, but is instead a sportscaster.
