A Hallowe'en party; There's a little celebration In the air. Here's the date—we surely hope That you'll be there.

Date: Friday, Oct. 29. Place: Helen Shank's.

At 8:30 a merry crowd gathered at the home of Miss Shank. They were led into the house by a ghost, and the receiving line was made up of ghosts with clammy hands, who emitted mournful sounds. The house was decorated with autumn leaves and Hallowe'en pumpkins. In one corner of the large front room an old witch held forth. The past, present and future was revealed to the guests by this mysterious dame. Then there was bobbing for apples, toasting marshmallows and dancing to amuse the crowd. Many of the girls were dressed in costumes—Gypsies, Hulu maidens, old-fashioned girls, Quakeresses and twin "Janes" in short dresses and socks romped together. About ten o'clock the party formed for a grand march and were led to the dining room. In the center of the table was a pumpkin filled with favors. At each place a ribbon led to the pumpkin. When this was pulled a box of candy came bobbing out of this original centerpiece. On the table there were several large plates of cakes and sandwiches, to which everyone was advised to help himself. Hot chocolate was served to those who were not in training for football or basket ball. After the refreshments the party gathered around the piano and sang some good old songs and yelled for the team. Then a rousing cheer was given for the hostess, after which "good nights" were said.

Those enjoying Miss Shank's hospitality were: Carolyn Glascock and Albert Stanton; Grey Fetter and Neal Jones; Lucille Wynne and Max Barnhardt; Mildred Morrison and E. J. Stafford; Margaret Pickard and Horace Murray; Frances Rankin and Francis Blackwood; Ruth Underwood and Harold Seburn; Nellie Irvin and James Wilkins; Mary Denny and Hubert Rawlins; Dorothy Colwell and Dick Wharton; Geraldine McDowell and Herman Thacker; Mildred Little and Buster Clement; Margaret Hartsell and Pete Pearce; Frances Harrison and Jeff Fordham and Allen Stainback. The chaperones were Miss Maraget Shank and Mr. and Mrs. Shank.

NANCY LITTLE ENTERTAINS

A delightful masquerade party was given on Friday night by Miss Nancy Little. The home was attractively decorated in Hallowe'en colors. Many interesting costumes were worn by the guests. Among other games progressive conversation was played, with appropriate Hallowe'en cards to be filled out. The guests enjoyed themselves thoroughly, and soon after the lovely refreshments were served reluctantly departed.

Those present were: Elizabeth Transou, Rebecca Ogburn, Marjorie Blair, Evelyn Trogdon, Elizabeth Simpson, Marjorie Cartland, Elizabeth Newell and Katherine Gregory; Bascom Ogburn, Dick Newell, Dick Crabtree, Robert Irvin, "Zeke" Wilson and Charles Lipscomb.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

The students in session room 207 gave a Hallowe'en party on Saturday evening in honor of their invited friends from other Sophomore session rooms. The lower halls of the High School were very attractively decorated in standard Hallowe'en style—cornstalks, pumpkins, persimmon branches, owls, black cats and autumn leaves. There was fortune telling, and ghost stories, cracker, candy and cake races for amusement; there were apples, lemonade, stick candy, popcorn and peanuts for refreshments.

A fashion display of Hallowe'en costumes resulted in the beauty prize being given to Miss Modine Wilkins, and the booby prize to Jack Bray.

The chaperones for the evening were: Mr. Price, Miss Killingsworth, Misses Carrie and Flossie Stout, and Miss Annie Beam.

DOROTHY COLWELL ENTERTAINS

On Friday afternoon at her home on South Park Drive, Miss Dorothy Colwell delightfully entertained sixteen of her young friends in honor of her sixteenth birthday. The rooms were lovely in their fall colors and Hallowe'en decorations. Rook was played throughout the afternoon at four tables. After several exciting games delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and her mother. Those enjoying Miss Colwell's hospitality for the afternoon were: Misses Lucille Wynne, Grey Fetter, Nellie Irving, Frances Harrison, Mildred Little, Margaret Pickard, Helen Shanks, Elizabeth Pickard, Edith Clements, Mildred Morrison, Josephine Thomason, Mary Denny, Ruth Underwood, Evelyn Thacker, Lewellyn Williams and Virginia Denny.

MRS. LAUGHLIN HONORED

Mrs. Helen Mangum Laughlin has been singularly honored in that she is on the program for the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, which this year convenes at Asheville during the Thanksgiving holidays. The Modern Language Association of the State is to be an affiliated branch of the State Association and at the meeting of Modern Language Association, Mrs. Laughlin is to make an address in Spanish on the subject: "The Importance of Spanish in the Schools." This is indeed a tribute to the ability and charm of Mrs. Laughlin who has spent quite a number of years in Mexico and who speak Spanish very plentifully.

RECEPTION IN HONOR OF G. H. S.

The G. H. S. football team was entertained at a most delightful reception given by the Charlotte High School. The Charlotte boys gave a demonstration of their ability to entertain as well as play foot-ball. Games were played, progressive conversation was the main feature of the evening. Many girls were present and the squad was made to feel at home. Later in the evening refreshments were served. After spending a most enjoyable evening, the Greensboro boys expressed their appreciation of the kindness shown them and returned to the homes throughout the city at which they were visiting.

City Commissioners, Greensboro, N. C. Gentlemen:

Do you think that you'd like your boys and girls to have to wade thru mud and slush in order to get to school in rainy weather? Why, of course you say "No!" But think of it! All of us are your boys and girls. Here is what I want to say: There are probably fifty boys and girls who live in west Greensboro, south of the railroad (perhaps you've never noticed, but we have,) to wade thru mud up to their ankles in midwinter in order to get to school. I know there have been dozens who have done it before us.

Times have changed! West Lee street has paved walks and so have most of the adjoining streets, but still we can't get to Greensboro High School (unless we go several blocks out of the way, and you know time counts in cold rainy weather) without going a block or so thru mud. There are only two streets that have paved walks connecting West Lee and Walker avenue. These are Lithia and Ashe. Now there are a great many boys and girls who live quite a distance from either of these streets and who have to go to G. H. S.

The street that should be paved is South Spring. Winter before last, one of the sidewalks of this street was made of cinders; but since the bakery and Lewis' laundry have been built, they are covered with red mud. Probably you know how this red mud is in west Greensboro. I have seen the time last winter when our overshoes would stick in the mud and come off.

Now don't you think that you could do a mighty good thing in having South Spring street paved from West Lee to Morehead avenue? By doing so you would increase the daily attendance of G. H. S. and, may be, save the lives of several girls and boys; for wet feet often cause pneumonia when best of all—do it!

Please think over what I have said, and you have to stay in school with them all day.

FACULTY PERSONALS

Miss Gladys Wilson and Miss Lillian Killingsworth attended the concert by the celebrated artist Caruso on Monday night of October 25.

Miss Lelia Baker spent the week-end of October 29-31, with her sister in High Point, N. C.

Miss Maud Minnish very delightfully entertained her Sunday School class at Hallowe'en party on Thursday night, October 28, at the home of Miss Troy on Mendenhall street.

Miss Elizabeth Kellam spent the week-end with her section of Girl's Reserve of Y. W. C. A. at the camp.

Miss Katie Pridgeon of the city schools has been transferred to High School. At present, she is assisting in the library.

Many members of the faculty who are N. C. C. W. alumni attended the Alumni Rally held at the college on Saturday, November 6. The demands for entrance to the college so far exceed its capacity both in dormitory and class room space that the alumnae, faculty and college officials realize that the college plant should be doubled.

Miss Catherine Penn and Miss Frances Clendenen, of Hollins, spent the week-end with Misses Frances Glascock and Miss Milissa Cook at R. M. W. C.
