

'Let Us Have Peace' Theme for Pageant

Class Day Program Presented to School: Original Skit by Routh and Whitely

This morning the Seniors presented their annual Class Day program in the school auditorium. It was an original skit, entirely composed and written by Katherine Routh and Helen Whitely.

Bill Smith acted as official reader. The first act took place at the locker of Jim Alexander and Ted Leonard.

Scene one was of an exciting High Point football game. Then in the second scene, they remembered the basketball game when Rick Ferrell split his pants and Jim Alexander sewed them up. In scene three, an informal dance was given by a group of Seniors. Parker Gay called the figures for a barn dance which took place in scene four. The Snake Dance from the High School elections was reinacted in scene five. With scene six, came some real talent in the form of Ann Van Horn, Edna Warden, and Loyce Nance, as they gave their wonderful rendition of "I Wish I Was A Red Rose Bush." Mabel Paige Byrum, Fred Nance, and Irvin Apple sang during scene seven.

With scene eight, came Merlin Byrum and his impersonations. In scene nine, Lucille Driver gave an impersonation of Miss Blackmon, as she handles a call from home with an excuse for an absence. In scene ten, three senior girls impersonated Greensboro High teachers, who were arguing about the students taking so many trips out of town in order to attend the games. In the next scene, ten more of the students hang-out from Wilkinson-McFall Drug Store to the Pix was shown. When in the twelfth scene, a grand impersonation of Mr. Dorsey was given, reminding him of all the announcements he got twisted over the speaker system.

Scenes Are Taken From U. S. History, Past and Present

By ABE JONES

"Let Us Have Peace" is the theme of the traditional Graduation Night pageant which will be presented May 30 by members of the Senior class before diplomas are presented.

The scenes in the program are taken from events in American history which show how men have striven for peace throughout the nation's past. Each scene demonstrates a factor on which world peace depends. In the Prelude, the Angel of Peace is depicted on stage while a prayer is offered.

Scene One
William Penn is shown in Scene One making a treaty of friendship with the Indians. In the second scene, Thomas Jefferson and his dream of religious tolerance are portrayed.

In the third scene General Robert E. Lee and his Northern counterpart, Ulysses S. Grant, recall the tragic days of the Sixties and the final peace at Appomattox.

In scene four, tolerance of the immigrants who came to the American haven is stressed.

Woodrow Wilson strides onto the stage in the fifth scene, which depicts the efforts for peace after the first World War.

Philippine Independence
Fidelity is displayed in the stirring scene of July 4, 1946, at which time the Philippine Islands became an independent nation fulfilling a promise made by the United States many years before the second World War.

In the final scene, the peoples of the United Nations are shown as

Twelve Win Gold Stars During Three Years

Around Senior High the wearers of the gold stars have always been recognized as the outstanding students both intellectually and as good citizens in the school. That gold star on his shirt or her dress or blouse represents one of the highest achievements of students at this school; the distinction of having made the honor roll every six weeks of their three years at Senior High.

To wear the gold star, the student must have been on the honor roll twelve times, but most of the gold star wearers have been on since they have been at Senior High.

These seniors have made the honor roll for the last three years consecutively: Earl Betts, Lucille Driver, Dolores Dunstan, Nancy Burton, Mary Ann Walsler, Lillian York, Betty Lou Moore, Jeannine Moore, Mary Reynolds, Helen Mae Sarles, Francis Sue Marquis, and Betty Marie Jones.

Those seniors having been on six times, entitling them to wear the silver star on the seventh time were: Margaret Alston, Peggy Bentley, Jack Bullard, Martha Graves, Lora Lou Gallagher, H. C. Fordham, Carol Byrd, Doris Cooper, Buddy Webb, Carolyn Wilkinson, Elizabeth Lowe, Martha Nell Keith, and Dick Kelly.

On the average, the seniors have led the whole school on the honor roll having on the average about 75 people on the regular honor roll and about 10 on the special honor roll.

Dramatic Club Group Anticipates Award

After their trip to Chapel Hill, the Dramatic Club has not been very active. However, there has been an interesting and helpful experience for the girls of the club during the Euterpe Club's production of "The Chocolate Soldier." The make up for the cast was put on by these girls under the direction of Miss Woosely. Some of the girls have expressed themselves as being grateful for this experience.

The last meeting of the year will be held to decide upon the lucky person who is to receive the Dramatic Cup. This cup goes to the person who is thought to have made the most progress throughout the year.

Larry Lambeth has done an exceedingly good job, as president of the group, with Jimmy Davis offering helpful advice as vice-president. Frances Sue Marquis and Lucille Driver, the girls who did a fine job in "A Case of Springtime," were secretary and treasurer respectively.

The officers for next year will not be chosen until the club has been formed in the fall.

Seniors Complete Washington Trip; Glimpse Pres. Aleman at Mt. Vernon

Recently returned from Washington, D. C., are 65 members of the senior class who spent the first three days of May in the nation's capital. The seniors were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Routh, Mrs. Blanche Smith, Miss Mary Ellen Blackmon and Miss Dorothy McNairy.

On Thursday, May 1, the group left Greensboro at 6:30 a.m. and proceeded to Richmond, Virginia, where a stop was made for lunch. Several seniors visited the capitol of Virginia, formerly the capitol of the Confederacy. Late in the afternoon the party saw the cavalcade of President Miguel Aleman of Mexico and Secretary of State George C. Marshall at Mount Vernon.

The first stop on May 2 was the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where they saw the steps in the manufacture of paper money. For the next few hours the seniors visited the capitol and both chambers of Congress. At the Supreme Court, they saw Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and some of his associates. At the Library of Congress, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were viewed by the seniors.

In the afternoon, the group visited the Smithsonian Institute, the National Gallery of Art, and the Lincoln Memorial.

At night many of the party went to the amusement park at Glen Echo, Maryland.

On Saturday morning the tour was resumed with stops at Washington monument, Arlington and Lee's home, the White House, and the Washington Cathedral. The rest of the day was for further tours or shopping, as the student desired.

The trip homeward began Sunday morning. The seniors visited the Endless Caverns near New Market, Virginia, after which they returned to Greensboro and home.

Booklet Emphasizes Religious Education

The week of May 5-11 was set aside at Senior High for special emphasis upon week-day religious education.

Many of our far-sighted and wise community leaders recognize the need for religion in public schools. Since the Bible is one of the world's greatest pieces of literature and its teachings have a great deal to do with our living in the world, to say nothing about the future rewards for obeying its teachings, a booklet has been compiled for daily devotional readings by the Bible Classes with an introduction by Louise Fredrick.

"The United States is looked upon as a Christian nation by the world. One thing that has brought us to this very high standard and has placed us as one of the leading nations of the world has been our faith in God and the Bible, which is His work," said Miss Fredrick.

The following courses are offered at Senior High School, each lasting one semester: A Survey of the Old Testament; The Life of Christ; The Acts and the Epistles; The Major and Minor Prophets of the Old Testament.

The statistics of those who are studying these courses in Senior High school and the denominations they represent throughout our city are listed below: Friends 5, Baptists 50, Methodists 42, Presbyterian 35, Christian 7, Holiness 7, Christ Gospel Temple 5, First Evangelical and Reformed 4, Episcopal 3, Salvation Army 2, Catholic 1, Christian Science 1, Greek, 1, Lutheran 1, Nazarene 1, No Church 5.

Bums Bask at Beach

By THOMAS

Ah, the beach! Sand, women, sun-burn lotion, women, more sand, more women! I really love that sand!

But really, the beach is no place for the summer. I'd much rather go to some quiet library and settle down with a nice educational book—say, "What Do the Birds, Bees, and Flowers Tell the Little Birds, Bees and Flowers in the Spring?"

But usually, I go to the beach every summer for research—research the boardwalk for that quarter I lost three years ago.

Seriously, though, if you want to have loads of fun, go out on the beautiful moonlit beach, with the waves and breakers roaring in the background and the silver sand underneath the foot, a beautiful girl on your arm, the full moon overhead, soft music drifting down from the pavilion to the left, and get the beautiful girl to help you hunt for new and different bottle-tops to add to your rapidly growing collection. Doesn't that sound wonderful! Besides, the bottle-tops show up better against the silver sands with the moonlight reflecting off of them.

So, if you've got some spare time and spare change, visit the beach, and while you're there, be sure and patronize the first pavilion on the right. I'll be jerking jiggle juice behind the counter!
