

Symphony Featured At Civic Program

The third in a series of Junior Civic Programs will be presented Friday, March 21, at Aycock Auditorium. The program will feature the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. All students having tickets for this performance will be excused from school at 2 o'clock, and the program will begin at 2:30.

The first program in this series was "The Vinegar Tree," a presentation by the Barter Theater of Virginia. The second program was presented by the Duke University Men's Glee Club.

Three GHS Students Take Navy Exams

Three members of the Senior class at Greensboro High School were in Raleigh February 12-15 competing for the NROTC scholarships which are offered. These boys, Bob Laughon, Bain Alexander, and Grey Egerton, will go to Washington for the finals and a physical examination if they win the competition at Raleigh. This is one of the most valuable scholarships available for it provides a complete college course. David Bradley, a graduate of Greensboro High School is now at Princeton under this scholarship.

Out of the nineteen students who took the preliminary test for the Angier B. Duke scholarship, six have been notified. Bain Alexander, De Hunter, Bobby Clark, Betty Jane Davis, Barbara Beavers, and Shay Harris are the ones who will compete in the district competition to be held later. There are only nine winners in the state thus making the competition very strict. The boys and girls groups are divided into districts—six for the boys and three for the girls—with only one winner from each district. This scholarship is worth $750 a year or $3000. However, to get the benefit of this scholarship the student must maintain a high scholastic record. There have been three previous winners of this scholarship from Greensboro High School, Zack Piephoff, Bob Green and Eva Newlin.

Nancy Haitcock has been notified that she has won a $400 scholarship at Catawba College if she will accept this offer.

There have been applications for scholarships at Agnes Scott and Davidson, but no winners have been notified as yet.

Three Classes Ready Plays For Contest

Every year the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes at Senior High each give a one-act play. The three plays are presented on the same evening. After the performance, the judges, who are usually teachers from Woman's College, Greensboro College, or one of the colleges in this vicinity, award a loving cup to the performers in the most outstanding play.

This year the plays to be presented are as follows: "Highness" by the senior class, "Two Crooks and a Lady" by the junior class, and the sophomore class is presenting "Finders Keepers."

The plays will be given Thursday, March 20, 1952, at 8:00 p.m. in the Greensboro Senior High auditorium.

In previous years the plays have been given by students chosen from each class with the class advisors as the directors, but this year the procedure is to be different. The members of the dramatic classes are so talented that it is not necessary for outsiders to participate in the plays. Miss Mozelle Causey, dramatics teacher, is to be the director.

All three plays will be presented at Salem College in Winston Salem at the district festival which is to be held there.

The winning play will go to Chapel Hill, N. C., where it will compete against the winning one-act plays from other schools.

Pictured above are the two main parking lots here at our institution. The top picture shows the students' or commoners' parking lot. The bottom picture is that of the teachers'. When asked for improvements on the top parking lot, the answer was: the maintenance corp is to take care of that. Therefore, the assumption is that the lower parking lot is also maintained in a similar fashion. Notice, however, how the tax payers money is applied to the various caste parking holes.

Lowdown on Staffers

The most important day in the following week to all staffers is Wednesday, better known as "make up" day. "Make up" is the process by which all copy and ads, which have arrived by this time from the printers, printed in long sheets, are pasted on old newspapers in the exact place where they must be printed for the new issue. Arranging the stories and ads so that the page will show good journalism is an art in itself. Green staffers spend as many as three hours arranging one page until they become better skilled. Many class periods are spent examining other school papers, studying their particular form, and criticizing both good and bad points.

The next red letter day, of course, is Friday, when the papers are distributed. They arrive from the printers just a few minutes before they are carried to the rooms, so the news is literally "hot off the press."

There are many other duties which must be carried out by the staffers and don't receive much recognition. These duties consist of proof-reading, mailing exchange copies to other schools, managing the business problems such as ads and expenses, and typing correspondence of various kinds.

The journalism students spend other class periods, when not busily writing copy, in class discussions, writing themes, and preparing term papers. Interviews are necessary in order to get some news material; so, much time out of class is spent talking to many people.
