Between acts of the Playmasters' presentation "Men Are Like Street-cars," Ann Dumaresq, a member of the Playmasters, presented Mr. Routh a check for $300 to help pay for the new curtains. The money came from the proceeds of the play.

Playmasters' Production Makes Gain Of $300

After packing away costumes and props from the performance of "Men Are Like Streetcars," which was presented February 1 and 2, the Playmasters found that a net profit of $300 had been made

February 1 and 2, the Playmasters found that a net profit $300 had been made.

This money will go for the financing of the three One-Act Plays which are to be presented in April and to meet other expenses.

"We are very pleased to find that $300 is our profit, since that is the amount we presented to Mr. Routh for the stage curtains," reports Miss Mozelle Causey, dramatics coach.

The demand for student tickets was so great that the 1500 tickets which were first printed had to be increased.

Much of the success of the production was due to the sincere, tireless effort that the members of Playmasters put into the practices. Ann Dumaresq, club president, reported that the members of the cast spent the free afternoons following exams to practice the play. While other students were enjoying the carefree days when snow prevented attending school, the cast was learning lines and the stage crew was working busily on the props and sound effects for the play. Other behind-the-scenes students were making posters designing programs, and contacting various businesses who loaned furniture and other needed items.

The Playmasters feel that they have been sufficiently awarded for all the effort that was put into the performance.

Several Groups In State Begin New Scholarships

Several new scholarships have been made available recently for those seniors who are eligible and interested in applying.

The Greensboro Elks Lodge No. 602 has announced an award of a $50 series E bond to be given to one senior girl and one senior boy. Complete details and instructions can be obtained at the office. The deadline for handing in applications, which will be reviewed by Mr. A. P. Routh, Mr. W. D. Hairod, Exalted Ruler, and Mr. V. E. Lindsey, scholarship chairman, was February 1.

Elon College provides eight scholarships—four for boys and four for girls. The awards are valued at $1200, $300, $600, and $400 for both boys and girls. All seniors are invited to apply. The contest closes February 14, and the winners, picked from entrants all over North Carolina, will be annonunced as a part of the program for Elon College's Annual High School Day.

nonunced as a part of the program for Elon College's Annual High School Day.

The Sears Roebuck Foundation, through Mr. Ort Jenkins, manager of the mail order division, makes available ten $100 scholarships to be presented on the basis of scholarship, service, character, need, and promise of success. An annuncement over the public address system concerning application will be made soon.

The University of North Caroline offers the Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship to any native—born, male resident of North Carolina who is at least 16 but not 21 years old and who is eligible to attend the University. One boy will be nominated from the Senior Class to compete for the conferment. The basis of selection will be high scholastic rank, character, qualities of leadership, achievements, physical health, vigor, and promise of future distinction.

The annual value will be $500 renewable for four years under specific conditions. The application must be in the hands of the University Committee on Scholarships by March 15. Finalists will be selected and a winner named not later than May 1.

The University of North Carolina also offers other scholarships ranging from $150 to $200 to $500 per annum. Applicants must be in the upper one-fourth of their graduating class and have definite need for some financial assistance. In addition to these scholarships, there is a student loan fund.

Ten music scholarships for Stetson University, Deland, Florida, are available to talented high school seniors. The deadline for

"But. I'm sure I wrote that caption!" wailed assistant editor Holly Deifell as she pawed frantically in an overflowing wastebasket. Burièd somewhere under the ten-foot mound of paper by the window was the editor's desk,, and more than likely the editor also—looking for the missing caption.

"Please be a little quieter!" pleaded Miss Virginia Powell, adviser, over the confusion of clattering typewriters and chattering tongues. The confusion was organized, however, thanks to Miss Powell, who, every staff member will agree, did a "bang-up" job, writing, editing, and supervising. The WHIRLIGIG room was in the usual state of turmoil that always preceeds the deadline. At the mention of the fatal day—February 1—feelings of anticipation and dread swept over the heart of many a staff member. It was for this day that he had hunched long hours over a type-writer, sold dozens of ads, taken scores of pictures, and performed a thousand tasks from mounting pictures to making layouts. When at last the time came when business manager Sally Durham could announce proudly, "We've made our budget," and editor Susan Graham could happily say, "The WHIRLIGIG is ready to go to press!" the staff waved a relieved farewell to Mr. Frank Fleming of Lassiter Press and the "dummy" with the fervent hope that this year's book will be the best ever!
