

Jackson Speaks To F.T.A. Group

Miss Lucille Browne, Guidance Director of Greensboro City Schools, opened the meeting of the Future Teachers of America on February 18, from 2:30-3:30 in the Senior High School auditorium.

Miss Browne introduced applications for a one hundred dollar scholarship. The scholarship is offered by the Delta Gamma Cappa organization, which is composed of teachers. All who planned teaching as a definite future were entitled to fill out an application for the scholarship. Miss Brown said that the applications must be filled out and turned in to Mr. L. W. Anderson by February 28. Jean Bateman won the scholarship last year.

Paddy Sue Wall, student at Senior and president of the F.T.A., introduced Doctor W. C. Jackson, the guest speaker.

Dr. Jackson talked to the group on "Teaching as a Profession." He suggests that teaching should not be chosen as a profession unless it is by one who really enjoys being around children. If you are really interested in teaching, you should go into that field he advised.

"I've studied law and had many opportunities to go into business, but I chose to remain in school work, and I have never regretted it for one moment." This was one of the comments made by Dr. Jackson.

Dr. Jackson is the former Chancellor of Woman's College, Dean, and History Professor at W. C. He was at one time Vice President of the Phi Beta Kappa. He has taught in every phase of teaching and was once principal of Senior High.

Wednesday February 16, the Beta Club took a survey on all juniors of Senior High. In this survey the students were asked what kind of course they were taking and what college they would like to attend after graduation.

The big school surveys are made available to: State Departments of Education, Federal Government Agencies, and Approved Education Institutions.

The reason for the survey is to give the address of the students so the colleges can start mailing out leaflets on the information of the different colleges.

DAILY DOUBLES

BY WANDA SLADE

When the super highway behind Senior is completed, these two will be prouder than most because they have helped clear part of the way with the bulldozer.

Our brown haired Miss X seems to be enjoying the ride on the bulldozer. She is 5 feet, 5 inches in height and has brown hair. Coming from Lindley Junior, she is a sophomore who regularly attends the WST Club meetings. English is her favorite subject. Miss X's pet peeve is "People who are always telling me to hold my shoulders up." Besides taking piano, she plays oboe for the band. A future hope for our lady of the week is to attend the University of Tennessee. She attends the First Baptist Church.

Auburn hair, blue eyes, and a height of 5 feet, 11 inches are the descriptive words for this senior boy. He plays the drums for the concert band and for the orchestra. Besides playing for these school organizations, he is in the Greensboro Symphony Orchestra. English is his favorite subject. "She is always borrowing my comb," states Mr. X when he was asked if he had a pet peeve concerning Miss

X. He also attends the First Baptist Church. If Uncle Sam doesn't get Mr. X, he plans to enter Eastern Carolina and major in music.

Our mystery couple of the week met August 23 at a pre-school band rehearsal. Five days later they had their first date, and November 17 they started going steady. They like to eat Submarine Hamburgers, their favorite food, while listening to "Blue Mirage," their favorite song, by Percy Faith. When asked who is the boss, the answer was "50-50."

You'll find their names in a popular ad.

Draft Board Calling Girls To Designing, Decorating

How many draftsmen do you know of the feminine gender? Chances are, not many. But there are two such ambitious junior girls right here at Ye Alma Mater.

These two Women of Tomorrow are Alice Pugh and Gloria Gauden. Alice's hopes are pinned on being an interior decorator, while Gloria intends to be a fashion designer. But what do these two have in common? They both know how to describe a chair.

Well, it really isn't quite that simple. Actually, they are both in the otherwise all-male drafting class. What do you learn in drafting? According to Alice, "If anyone asks you to describe a chair, for example, you have to be able to draw several different views thoroughly and accurately to get a true picture. And that's what drafting is... drawing quickly and accurately." (When Alice learned she was being interviewed for High Life, she modestly pointed out that she herself is quite an expert at drawing chairs.)

How do ambitions of this kind begin? Because of her father's work in this field, Alice acquired an interest in architecture. Gloria's first interests were also due to paternal influence. However, their course in drafting has modified their ideas, for while both originally planned to be architects, they have both changed their minds to something definitely more in the feminine line.

"Both these careers are centered around drafting, mathematics, and geometric processes," explained Alice. "In decorating, the knowledge of architectural drawing gained in drafting is a necessity. The correct lines and proportions in a house depend upon the knowledge and skill of a good draftsman."

"Drafting helps you to make patterns precisely and accurately, and this is an absolute necessity in dress-making," avouched Hattie Carnegie Gauden, who, having made some of her own dresses, speaks from experience. At first Gloria was afraid that a great deal of talent was essential for a fashion designer. But during Careers Day she learned that this is not necessary.

"WC, here we come!" is the cry of these career gals. Alice hopes to conquer the interior decorating department. By the way, her father still encourages all this, but Mom has hopes of Alice's becoming a school teacher. (To this Alice strenuously objects). After a year's business course, Gloria first hopes to work in a fashion business and then either to open her own dress shop or to enter a couturiere's establishment.

Do these girls like drafting? "I love it!" was Alice's instant reply. Gloria, at a loss for words expressive enough, merely explained why she likes it with, "I guess I just like it." As for being in a class full of boys, both agree that "you hardly know it!"

But how does Mr. D. L. Darnell, the drafting instructor, feel about having two girls in his class? "I treat them as equals!"

Hi, everyone! I suppose you all have your student cards by now, haven't you? Well, if you're one of the few who doesn't have one, hurry and get it because it really helps the pocketbook. And say, folks, a really marvelous picture is coming to the CAROLINA THEATRE Sunday to play through Wednesday.

The Cinema Scope production, filmed in color, is "Bad Day at Black Rock," starring Spencer Tracy and Robert Ryan. Others in the distinguished cast are Anne Francis, Dean Jagger, Walter Brennan, John Ericson, Ernest Borgnine, Lee Marvin, and Russell Collins. The story is full of suspicion, contempt and hatred facing a single man by an entire town.

Be sure to see "Bad Day at Black Rock" for a movie with suspense and emotional impact.

Another great picture we've all been waiting for is "Battle Cry," which starts Thursday at the CAROLINA THEATRE.

Starring in this CinemaScope picture are Van Heflin, Aldo Ray, James Whitmore, Tab Hunter, Mona Freeman, Nancy Olson, Dorothy Malone, and Anne Francis. Filmed in WarnerColor, the movie follows closely Leon Uris' novel dealing with the romances, the training, and the battle of a group of Marines during World War II.

The boot camp and other training sequences before the men are shipped overseas were photographed at Naval and Marine installations in San Diego and at the Marine Base at Camp Pendleton.

So long, folks! Be seeing you at the CAROLINA THEATRE.

Madlin's Latin Pupils Study Roman Culture

Mrs. Mary Madlin's second year Latin classes have recently been doing library research on Roman life and culture in connection with their study of the ancient language.

Most students are doing individual projects on such topics as Roman amusements, food, education, marriages, and other subjects pertaining to classical civilization. However, some topics are so broad, such as Roman government and religion, that several students have collaborated on them. Diana Harmon and Eve Purdom are making the costume of a Roman matron, and Jerry Danford is fashioning a Roman soldier's uniform. Both of these costumes will be entered in the Roman style show at the Junior Classical Convention in Chapel Hill on March 19.
