

Vacation For Markowitz Is "Dream Come True"

Have you ever fallen down the stairs in Grand Central Station? That's exactly what Jane Markowitz, senior, did to start off her summer with a bang.

Along with 17 other out-of-state girls and two chaperones, Jane left New York July 11 for a five weeks guided tour of Canada and Western United States. After reaching the Canadian border via Chicago, the girls had to walk across it, in order to board the Canadian-Pacific train.

Canoeing, riding ski lifts, seeing open-topped buses stop long enough to allow bears to cross the road, added to the girls' thrill and delight in Canada. After having a picturesque tour of Victoria, the group then traveled by boat to Seattle, Washington.

From there, they journeyed by train on the famous Shasta Route to San Francisco. Although the party of girls shared a whole car, one girl had a rather hard time explaining to the railroad office just how she had happened to leave her ring in the men's room.

Touring Chinatown, visiting the Fisherman's Wharf, seeing Alcatraz, and hearing a Navy Band Concert added to the glamour of San Francisco for the group.

From Yosemite Park to Glacier Point where the Fire Falls originate, came a several days visit to Laguna Beach. Here the girls saw the interesting House of a Million Shells, the only one of its kind in the world. They also visited Tijuana, New Mexico.

On to Hollywood and Beverly Hills in Los Angeles, the group saw 40 homes of famous movie stars, ate at the original Brown Derby and saw Steve Allen's television show, among other interesting things.

Jane was scared to death when, at Knotts Berry Farm, a noted Western ghost town, she rode a miniature train and was one of the victims of a make believe hold-up staged at the end of the ride.

At the Hollywood Bowl, the tour heard Andre Kostelanetz, guest conductor, and William Warfield and his wife, who were guest singers. They also saw the dancers, Marge and Gower Champion.

After visiting Disneyland and Grauman's Chinese Theater, where movie stars have their footprints or signatures in the front pavement, Jane and the girls traveled on to the Grand Canyon. Says Jane of the Canyon, "Two other girls and I walked about a mile down the canyon and wouldn't have made it back if it hadn't been for three boys who came to our rescue half pulling and half pushing us back up."

The last stop was Estes Park, Colorado. On August 19, the train with the same girls and two chaperones, pulled into Grand Central Station.

When asked of her summer's adventure, Jane remarked, "This summer was certainly a dream come true."

Celebrities And Pupils Possess Pet Peeves

"Oh, how that irks me!" "you want to go to the moon right quick?" "You're gonna get yours!" Any or all of these exclamations are issued forth from the student who owns a pet peeve.

Idiosyncrasies seem to be prevalent throughout the human race, and the pupils at Senior High are no exceptions.

However, Sidney Oliver denies possessing a pet peeve "until somebody starts yelling." There are three who readily acquiesce on their peculiarities, while Carolyn Paschal voices the same opinion.

Carolyn is effervescent with pet peeves, it seems. She abhors being excluded from the boys' conversation on dates. In retaliation of this sentiment, David Wible states his case vice versa.

Betty Sapp's pet peeve is the ever popular, persistent, proverbial pencil-player. Jane Markowitz is constantly being confused with Heinz Worcestershire Sauce.

While on the subject of Confusionism, Marilyn Monroe nearly blew her top when compared to Audrey Hepburn. After all, Marilyn has a much better mind than Audrey. George Gobel converts into a dirty bird when compared with Barry Startz.

Rhett Butler's "destination" is seeing his hat "go with the wind." A new pet peeve of Estes Kefauver is the newly-acquired popularity of David Crockett, who stole his gimmick. Coonskin caps and all that, old bean!

Topping the scales is Jackie Gleason whose provocation is people who don't glut their faces. (Study that connotation, Webster!)

Technicolor and magnificent Vista Vision, this tension-loaded drama relates the story of a reformed jewel thief, who because of several recent robberies reminiscent of his old technique, is forced into hiding. Knowing that he would be immediately suspected and jailed by the police, he sets out to find the real thief, thus clearing himself of the robberies. During his quest he meets rich and lovely Grace Kelly. He plans to use her and her diamond-covered mother as bait for the real thief. However, while Grant is set to catch a thief, Miss Kelly is set to catch Grant. As you can see, there promises to be quite an interesting ending. "To Catch A Thief" offers the best of Alfred Hitchcock, and that's the best there is.—Adv.

Lady Fortune Pays Visit To Miss Maude Carter

"Yippee! What I've always wanted—an aqua dinette set!" might have been the exclamation of Miss Maude Carter when she discovered Lady Fortune had gifted her with a prize from the new Kroger Grocery Store.

Miss Carter's luck materialized one day during the summer when she took a little trip to Kroger's—(yes, the "One cent profit from every dollar" Kroger's). As she strolled around the store, buying her groceries and birdseed (musn't forget Tweetie Pie), she encountered a box. Refusing to budge without an explanation, she found some cards and decided it was a contest box. Far be it from Miss Carter to ever pass up such an opportunity, so she signed a card for the lucky drawing.

Lo and behold, whose card should be picked out but Miss Carter's. She had a choice of prizes—a set of tubeless tires, an electric sweeper, a window fan, a set of golf clubs and a dinette suite. After analyzing these possibilities she chose the dinette suite.

She rushed down to Sears to get her prize. No, she didn't carry it home piggy-back. It was delivered to her apartment and in no time replaced the old and much used dinette set. A slight difficulty had to be overcome in removing the old one. In fact, the legs had to be disjointed (sob! sob!)

When Miss Carter's landlord eyed her new furniture, he decided that the kitchen walls weren't fit surroundings for such "finery." He proceeded to have the room painted—bright yellow. Alas! Alack! The new paint job shamed the other rooms, so he had to redo the whole apartment.

Pickin' The Pix

By Elwood Hartman

Hello there! I hope you have survived these first two weeks of school. Getting used to doing homework after those carefree summer months surely is tough, and it doesn't leave much time for pleasure. So why not spend your free night or plan to have your weekend date at the CAROLINA THEATRE where you always find entertainment at its best?

Starting Sunday at the CAROLINA is the Alfred Hitchcock production, "To Catch A Thief" Starring Cary Grant and Grace Kelly. This suspense packed, intriguing plot promises to live up to all the superlatives associated with a Hitchcock production. Filmed on the beautiful French Riviera in
