

LIBRARY EXHIBITS MANY NEW BOOKS DURING NATIONAL BOOK WEEK EVENT

By Miss Mildred Herring
There's a wonderful variety of subjects in the new fall books which have been on display in the conference room during Book Week November 25-December 1. Space will not permit mentioning too many, but here are some of the more outstanding ones.

A NIGHT TO REMEMBER is the minute by minute account of the sinking of the Titanic when it struck an iceberg.

WHY YOU SAY IT gives the fascinating stories behind over 700 everyday words and phrases. The term "gold-bricking" refers to a popular swindle of the Gold Rush day. This book is one that can be picked up for browsing.

Football Stories Available
THE SAGA OF AMERICAN FOOTBALL recalls exploits of great players along with the brilliant tactics of famous coaches, such as Knute Rockne, Red Grange, and others.

ZOO EXPEDITIONS contains the enthralling stories of seven scientific expeditions told by a man who took part in them himself; one of these journeys was to the Belgian Congo to capture wild elephants and bring them back safely to the zoo. Another expedition, made to the cave in Mexico, proved to the world of science the origin of blind fish living in those black underground waters.

ACROSS THE HIGH FRONTIER is the exciting biography of Major Charles E. Yeager, who was the first man to break the sound barrier.

MAN IN THE IRON LUNG is another interesting biography of Frederick B. Snite, one of the first victims of paralytic polio who had to depend on an iron lung for life, but who turned tragedy into a triumph.

NELLIE BLY FIRST WOMAN REPORTER is the story of a woman who entered the newspaper world in 1885 when few careers were open to women. She risked her life to expose crime and corruption. Her frantic race around the world brought her international fame.

New Biographies

Babe Zaharias, the great woman golfer who succumbed to cancer only a short time ago, tells her own life story in THIS LIFE I'VE LOVED.

COLD HAZARD is a gripping story of the terrifying struggle of five men against the cold fury of the North Atlantic sea. For six endless days, 17-year-old Jim Naylor and the four other men were at the mercy of a wild North Atlantic gale.

I wonder if Miss X is really learning anything. She couldn't find a better teacher for Spanish than Mr. X.

In the ninth grade Miss X gave a dance and he came stag. She met him then and they became better acquainted when he started going to her church. This "Latin Lovers" couple had its first date October 23, 1955 and started going steady December 1, 1955.

Miss X, a blonde, blue-eyed senior standing 5 feet 5 inches tall hails from Central. She is vice-president of the SDC's and a member of the WHIRLIGIG staff. She also sings in the choir. In her sophomore year she was in JCL.

Mr. X, a brown haired, "brown-eyed handsome man" stands 5 feet, 7 inches tall and comes to Senior from Lindley. He was born in Cuba and moved to Greensboro in the ninth grade. He participated in the Torchlight Talent Show with his twin brother in their sophomore year. They did a tumbling act.

As a favorite food Miss X likes steak while Mr. X likes chicken and rice or arroz con pollo as he calls it.

I hope you Spanish students will help others translate this line so everyone can find the names, encounter loss montres en un anuncio.

Po' Soul Tries To Drive: Cops Declare Emergency

As overheard in the hall after lunch:

"Hey, Hildegarde!"

"Yea?"

"Guess what!"

"What, Gertie?"

"Po' Soul doesn't date!"

"He doesn't, really?"

"It's a shame, but you know why, don't you?"

"No, why?"

"It's obvious, Hildegarde. He doesn't have a car!"

"Well glory! Why not?"

"He doesn't have a job, so he hasn't got any money."

"How icky, Gertie. Imagine a boy not getting a job so he could buy a car so he could ask somebody out. Why doesn't he get a job?"

"He doesn't want one."

"Well, of all the nerve. Why doesn't he want one?"

"He doesn't want a car so why should he get a job?"

"Whoa hoss—one more once. He doesn't want a CAR?!!!"

"Ya, Hildegarde. He can't drive."

"How horrible! He oughta learn. You know who bachelors are—boys what didn't have a car in high school."

That's how it all started. These two innocents, Gertie and Hildegarde, took pity on Po' Soul and determined that he should learn to drive.

They weren't hired by the Reds. They didn't plan to bring the people of Greensboro to a violent end. They didn't plan to work the highway cops overtime; however, they have succeeded extraordinarily well in doing exactly these things. They have put Po' Soul on wheels.

The fact that he didn't often read library books surprisingly enough made it difficult for him to really get into his learner's book.

Over and Over and Over

To tell the truth, Po' has started the drivers' manual over so many times he knows the introduction by heart. This fact was equally important when Po' took the exam for the learner's permit since he never did learn too much about the middle and end of this book because he couldn't seem to gain much ground, or mud, or dirt (bad roads, you know) after he passed said introduction.

Have you ever seen a lolly pop... n? It's the same thing as seeing Po' Soul drivin'—legally. Po's actual drivers' test was so pathetic it would have melted the heart of a snowman (take that either way you wish). Po' failed geometry so he didn't do so hot on parallel parking. He was so nervous he sat on his monocle and therefore flunked his eye test.

Traffic Bothers Po'

When Po' was learning to drive (he used a do-it-yourself kit) he always practiced on little-used country roads. On this account he got rather flustered when he had to drive in traffic. So much so and so noticeable was it that on his way to the highway department to take his drivers' exam Po' got a ticket for careless and reckless driving and for driving without a license.

As anyone must realize, Po' kinda passed with his colors all furled, but Po' will keep his chin up (so he can see over the wheel)—he won't give up the ship (even if they won't let him drive a car)—he'll show the world. Yes, Po's gonna show the world, and he plans to start now by getting safety glass put in his monocle.

GHS Key Club Packs TB Seals As Project

GHS's Key Club has been engaged in several projects lately.

November 7 the boys met at the Christmas Seal headquarters instead of their usual Wednesday dinner meeting. The boys spent two hours packing T.B. seals to be mailed out to Greensboro citizens. Jey Delfell has been in charge of plans for a Key Club scholarship. The Club decided to set up a $300 fund for this purpose. The qualifications will be announced later and applications will be available before Christmas.

Robin Farr models the classic school-day outfit, given an exciting air by the superbly matched colors. The Heaven Mist sweater, with a look and feel of cashmere, is an elegant blend of lambs wool fur, and nylon ($10.95). The gracefully draped skirt of soft Majella flannel echoes perfectly the color of her cardigan ($10.95).

To give her outfit an extra perk, Robin wears a three-quarter length sleeved blouse of silken broadcloth by Majestic ($4.95). Besides the lush aqua Robin wears, these colormates come in tangerine and cafe au lait. They are sold in ELLIS STONE Sportswear, Fashion Floor.
