Holiday Shopping Gets Po, So Does Store Detective

50 A. D. Rome is in her prime. No one doubts but that she will endure forever, except a very small group headed by Poius Soulus. They realize they must preserve the Roman culture. They institute JCL.

1956 A. D. Greensboro is —. The time machine quivers, shimmies, and then focuses. It lays open the heart and core of this fabulous suburb of Hamtown, U. S. A. What makes the heart throb? JCL, of course.

The Christmas meeting. A descendant of that famous Roman is present, Po' Soul. These gallant conservationists of the finer things in life are indulging in Pollyanna.

This is a Christmas game. You draw names and furnish the name you receive with a present. Po' has just drawn. Hildegard Mufdence he reads. Hildegard. A girl! Po' buy a girl a present? What would he get?

10:30 a. m. Saturday next, Po' shopping for Hildegard. His mother suggested perfume. Perfume it will be. Squirt perfume bottles. Used for sampling the different odors. Invented just for Po' Soul's sake. After blowing nose, Po' proceeds to sniff. Oooo it tickles. Let's see — "Man Trap" — No, please. Never let them say Po' was the one who wished that on some poor male.

This scent smells good. So does that one. Po' can't decide. Ah, ah, ah-h-h-h! A mixture is the solution. Gurgle, gurgle. Bang. The store clerk got him. Young man, —?; m@lb. Well, no perfume. What could Po' get in this next department? Oh, blush. They probably don't have anything suitable, anyway.

The record department. Very good Po'. What would she like? "True Love" by Bing and Grace? Where's a clerk for Pete's sake, or Frank's sake, or Hank's sake . . . for Hildegard's sake. Somebody, YOO-HOO!

Po' there's a clerk down there at the other end of the floor. Signal her. No luck. Take the record and show it to her. Maybe she can help — "Hey you, running off with the merchandise, huh? I know about you teenagers. Anything you can get away with is OK."

"Mister . . . I . . ."
"Oh, shut up. I know how to handle shoplifters."

The poor soul.
A box of chocolates. Nope, she can't eat chocolate. Stockings, no, size. Sweaters, no, money. Jewelry-trite. Lipstick, no, color.

Po', it's always book time, remember something to read is always appreciated, timely. It shows such good taste, too. Reveals that you think the person a mature individual.

Have them gift wrap it, Po'. A year's subscription to "True Love Comics."

Mr. and Miss Christmas seem to be celebrating the season's spirit a little early, with the mistletoe I mean.

The Christmas couple will really have something to celebrate come Christmas Eve, since that is the anniversary of their first date and because since then they have dated no one else.

Miss Christmas, coming from Central, has the appropriate colors of the season having red hair and green eyes. She stands 5 feet 7½ inches, likes horseback riding and chocolate pie. She plans to go to Duke University and major in something pertaining to chemistry after leaving Senior, the Ellis Stone board of fashion, and the DDT's of which she is treasurer and the memories of Girls' State.

Mr. Christmas, coming from Aycock, with blond hair and blue eyes, plans to go to Wake Forest. He stands 6 feet 4 inches and is on the basketball team, which figures. He is a member of the Junior Civitans, likes golf, duck hunting, and pancakes.

Their song is "Walk Hand in Hand," and their pet peeve is the expression, "No sweat."

A little on the technical side, I guess, is the fact that each time the couple date, they go about 40 miles, since Miss Christmas lives way out on the Groomtown Road.

Look now for their names because I'm sure that Santa won't be putting them in your stocking.

GHS Students, Teachers Are On Science Program

November 30 at 7 p. m. three Senior High students and three teachers appeared on Channel 4 at Woman's College with Dr. Seymour Rogers and his Science Fair Program, which lasts 30 minutes.

Mrs. Nellie Blackburn, head of the Science Department, stated that the purpose of the Fair is to encourage students to do more individual and better work and to create more interest in science.

Next on the program was Mrs. Kate Everhart, biology teacher, who discussed the organization from the standpoint of both the student and the presentation.

Milton Sharer, chemistry instructor, presented Rufus Russell and Jerry Kennon with their original project, the use of the photo electric cell which was used with a solar battery made of silicone to transform sound waves into light. Helen Payne narrated for the boys.
