

BILL'S BULL

BY BILL ILER

"I was a spy for the C.I.A.," said Tom informingly.

"Recreation, anybody?" Joe asked playfully.

"I only have the Mumps," said Jim infectiously.

"Our group had 32% more cavities," said Bill, with a crestfallen smile.

"This horse won't stop," said Tom woefully.

"I've lost my crutches," Wayne said lamely.

"I just lost at Russian roulette," said Jim absent-mindedly.

"Get to the back of the boat," said Sam sternly.

"You have the charm of Venus," Tom murmured disarmingly.

"I'm glad I passed my Electrocardiogram," Irma said wholeheartedly.

"I've been looking forward to this ride," said Lady Godiva shiftlessly.

"That dog has no pedigree," he muttered.

"What I like to do on a camping trip, is sleep," said Tom intently.

"How about a day at the race track?" asked Fred hoarsely.

"My wife is not easy to get along with," he remarked shrewdly.

"What our ball club needs is a man who can hit 60 homers a year," said the coach ruthlessly.

There were two microbes in the bloodstream of a horse, one in an artery, and the other in a vein. One day they met in the horses' heart and decided to trade places. Two days later the horse died. This all goes to show that you shouldn't change streams in the middle of a horse.

Miss Herring: "What would happen if cows were put into orbit?"
Ken: "It would be the first herd shot 'round the world!"

Charlie: "I just got home from the dentist."

Laura: "What did he do?"
Charlie: "He was pulling teeth, and he took each nerve out and put them on a rack so he could study them."

Laura: "Wow! That must be a tedious job."
Charlie: "No, it's nerve-racking."

Did you hear about the glass blower who inhaled? Now he has a pane in his stomach.

King Arthur: "How much'll you take for this armor, Launce?"

Sir Launcelot: "Four cents an ounce, because that's first class mail."

Mrs. Everhart: "Why do dragons go to sleep in the daytime?"

Steve Sophomore: "So they can hunt knights."

It was recently discovered that the plants in Miss Burnside's room grew square roots.

All the little pigeons had left the nest and learned to fly but one. The mother pigeon said, "Son, if you don't learn to fly I'll have to tow you." The little pigeon cried, "I'll learn mamma. I don't want to be pigeon-towed."

Contrary to popular belief: A saboteur is a trip that spies take.

Mrs. Proctor: "If all the cars in the nation were pink, what would you have?"

Bob: "A pink car nation."

During a tennis tournament, a fellow sat down beside a girl. "Whose game" he asked. "I am" she answered.

A wooden nickel is an oaken token.

ANN SLANDERS HEARS YOUR STORY

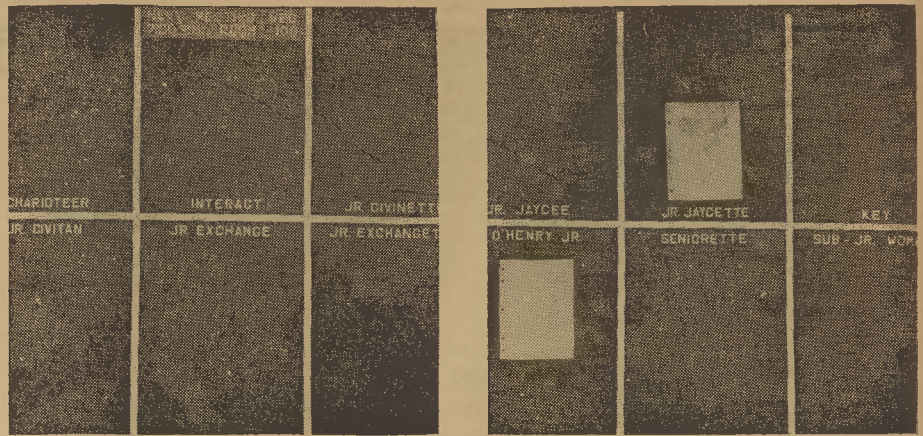

Editor's Note: Miss Slanders has directed me to say that she would like to give more advice to students, but she cannot because the students are not coming to her with their problems. She also stated that the door to her office is always open to students but that if they are embarrassed to face her, they can send their trouble in written form. (Please print or type.) Also, the first part of Ann Slanders is confidential between her and The Martyr.

Dear Martyr:

In view of the circumstances, I think that a person with your intelligence and charms, and having the problem which you are confronted with should kill herself. Yes commit suicide. You've earned it.

Dear Ann Slanders:

I am a goofy-looking girl, and like all goofy-looking girls I'm looking for a goofy-looking boy to go steady with. Well, Ann, my problem is that I just can't find one. No goofy-looking boys ever ask me for dates. I have tried everything I know to get me a goofy-looking boy-friend. I've worn masks which are designed especially to attract goofs, and even written to circuses, asking them where they find their people for their side-shows. I am thoroughly stumped. What do I do?

Signed: Goofy

Dear Goofy:

Don't be dismayed by not being the most popular girl in school. You just have to wait until the right goofy boy comes along, even though it may be some time.

Cop Off To Good Start

The COP, or Co-operative Office Practice, is a program whereby interested students may receive needed office training, at a salary, and at the same time, complete their high school education. The accepted system is for the "working" student to attend classes in the morning and hold an afternoon job in an office. The student may also attend night school if he so desires.

The COP at Grimsley is under the direction of Mrs. McEntire, and is considered one of the most effective self-help work programs in the state. Thirty-five students are engaged in COP at GHS, and are actively employed in some of Greensboro's leading industrial organizations and business firms. Many of these establishments offer these part-time employees a permanent position after graduation.

Of course, the COP has advantages which are not all work-related. Many of the companies have country clubs for the relaxation and recreational benefits of the employee.

Also, COP students have formed a club which holds a dinner meeting once every month. At these meetings, problems encountered by the different members at their jobs are discussed. At other meetings, the members have an informal get-together, and just try to forget the office.

At the first meeting, held Oct. 8, members of the National Secretaries Association met with the COP students at the Mayfair Cafeteria. Miss Martha Gately gave a stimulating talk on the proper office attire. A discussion period followed with questions being answered concerning popular clothes for teenagers in the office as well as in school. Mrs. Carolyn Summers then spoke on the appropriate attitude for a well-rounded person.

Among the NSA secretaries in attendance, were Miss Judy Johnson, secretary to the director of Cone Hospital, and Miss Juanita Ramsey, secretary to John Hatfield, general manager of Sears Mail Order House.

The main point which these successful secretaries tried to get across in their talks, was that success isn't reserved for the genius or the highly advanced person.

Through the COP, participating students have been given large opportunities to design their futures. Also, they have learned that ambition and willingness to work and get ahead rate very high in being successful.
