

Bill's Bull

By BULL ILER

Flash! Elephants are no more! With this one last joke, the elephants and all of their jokes have been canned.

What is red and white on the outside and gray on the inside? Tee! Hee! A can of cream of elephant soup!

After all of our elephants have been creamed, a new star has entered the jokelight, the grape!

What is purple and lights up? Chuckle! Chuckle! A neon grape! What is purple and stomps out forestfires? Yuh! Yuh! Smokey, the fire preventing grape!

The grapes are coming! The grapes are coming!

How do you tell if there are a bunch of grapes in the bathtub with you? Answer: Taste some of the water and see if it tastes anything like grape juice.

A grape was overheard telling this funny: What do you have after a forest fire? Answer: Crispy Critters!

Al Richbourg was overheard telling this one:

"How do you drive a baby buggy?"

"Tickle his feet!"

"Jerry, what do you know about French syntax?"

"Gosh, I didn't know they had to pay for their fun."

Man talking to an old farmer: "Lived here all your life?"

Farmer: "Not yet."

First Cannibal: "Have you seen the dentist lately?"

Second Cannibal: "Yes, he filled my teeth at dinnertime."

Contrary to popular belief: A zoo is a place where animals look at silly people.

"I'm taking three courses in college: French, Spanish, and Algebra."

"Let me hear you say good evening in Algebra."

Two weeks ago, Seniors in Miss Burnside's advanced algebra classes were ready to protest against discrimination.

In Christianity a man can have only one wife. This is called Monotony.

Wife, showing a new hat to her husband: "It didn't cost me a thing, dear. It was marked down from $20 to $10, so I bought it with the $10 I saved."

An Indian reservation is a place that consists of a mile of land for every 5 square Indians.

Irate student: Mr. Glenn, I don't think I like eating in the cafeteria with all these flies."

Mr. Glenn: "Well, point out the ones you don't like and I'll chase them out."

Everyone in my family was called Hubert except my mother. We couldn't call her Hubert because her sister's name was Hubert.

9 Ways To Kill Time During Christmas

With Christmas vacation just a few short periods away, students are beginning to wonder just what they will do to keep themselves busy for such a long period of leisure time. High Life, keenly aware of all current facts, situations, data, developments and pertinent information, realizes that there are those people who can't think of anything for themselves, so we have prepared to list of occupations which we feel are intellectually stimulating, and will help them pass the time.

1.) See how far you can drive your parents and friends by making up insipid jokes and puns, elephant, grape, or otherwise. For instance: "What is the definition of a raisin?" Answer: "a grape with leporsey." Or "What did the turkey wing say after he was left-overs for the third straight meal?" Answer: "Curses! Foiled again!" This activity will keep your mental faculties in good working order while you are away from the usual intellectual influences of your teachers.

2) Mass produce paper airplanes and then invite all of your friends to see a hockey game with you. This will provide hours and hours of fun and entertainment for you.

3.) Obtain sheet music from some of the more popular rock and roll tunes and read them slowly and formally at the dinner table or other family gatherings. Making these readings laily will guarantee a rollicking meal time at your house until someone chokes to death.

4) Play with your younger brothers' and sisters' Christmas toys. These things get better all the time, and it's amazing what you can do with them. This year they're putting out Buddhist Monk dolls that actually set themselves on fire when you wind them up.

5) Read a book.

6) Get a job.

7) Block off the portion of the street in front of your house and throw a gigantic street dance on New Year's Eve. Think of all the money you can save. Music can be provided by car radios, and everyone will be too cold for refreshments.

8) Spend rainy days downtown in the department stores teasing your friends who are trying to sell stuff.

9) Plan your strategy for April Fool's Day. You know it's never too early to plan for things, especially something as important as April Fool's Day.

Once upon a time there was a one fingered pick pocket who could only steal Life Savers.

Miscellaneous Fund Pros And Cons Given

Teachers and faculty members at GHS have suggested that a miscellaneous fund be established to provide films and speakers for their classes. Every film that a teacher shows to her classes must be paid for with her own money, and every speaker must come at her expense.

Mrs. Smith, World History teacher at GHS, suggested, "If each service club would contribute a small amount of their earnings each month to a miscellaneous fund, there would soon be enough money to rent the films needed to show to the classes."

Bill Iler, president of the Interact Club, stated, "Our club would be happy to donate money to this fund, and I'm sure other clubs will agree with me."

Most important of all is the way the students feel about this. Many students were asked how they felt about this fund. Every person asked was in favor of it.

Sophomore Pat Wiley expressed her opinion by saying, "I think that this fund sounds like a good idea. It would be nice to be able to see more films and hear speakers during class."

"We only had one speaker last year when I was a sophomore. All the kids enjoyed him and wanted to hear more. None of us realized that these speakers came at our teacher's expense. If we had known, we would have suggested something like this fund before," announced Robert Voight, junior.

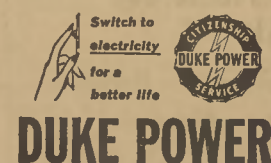

Adults were also asked to express their opinion concerning this fund. The adults questioned were those who had graduated from GHS and now have children attending here.

Mrs. Tom Shore stated, "I wish we had had an opportunity to hear speaker when we were at GHS. I think this fund will benefit all the students and give them a goal to strive for."

The majority of the people agreed that this fund would be both useful and educational to all students at GHS and help to set an example for other schools to follow.

O Learned Woe

As a sixth grade student I was given one IQ test and one Teacher's recommendation to qualify for one of North Carolina's first accelerated education programs. Thirty student were swooped upon by Education's Bird of Prey, commonly called the city school board, and neatly snatched from our nests only to be slapped in a new school with a strange teacher (strange, with all it's connotations, suits her perfectly).

Oh, what a glorious experience this new class was to be! No one could know how well educated we became—we knew all about everything! After all, who wouldn't be a true sage after one week of geometry, one week of physics, one week of chemistry, one week of biology, one week of algebra, one week of trigonometry, a week of French. As one can easily see we soon become weak in everything!

The day for which the class especially yearned was the weekly visit of the psychologist and psychiatrist. I loved to see them come because they always brought such delightful tests for us. Although none of the class has heard results of any of these tests, we were told that they helped us enormously. I personally think those tests were worthless because they never answered my most urgent question. On the back of each test there was always a place to confess heartbreaking problems and ask for help, but of course this would be kept in strictest confidence. I bet I asked 20 times how I could get Richard to love me, but I never got any help from either the tests or the couch fiends. Richard still doesn't love me!

Following that year of fun and games with snatches of knowledge inserted occasionally, the real treat of education's halloween was to be ours. In order to allow us to get an entire semester ahead of our menial friends, we were allowed to start algebra in the eighth grade. Many were the benefits to be reaped . . . we might graduate from high school a semester early, and also gloat over our afore mentioned friends as they struggled with math we had supposedly whipped through semester earlier. There is a drawback to this, ever so slight as it may be; no accredited four year college of high academic rating will accept eighth grade work, so those of our class had to take an extra semester of advanced math to compensate.

After completing the confused acceleration of Jr. High, we progressed to the high school level and befuddled acceleration. Here quality education was altered to quantity education; that is to say, regular classes cover the same material in the same time as do accelerated classes, but accelerated classes do five times as much homework. This five times rule may become exceedingly monotonous if there are only a certain number of things to study.

Now the time has come when members of our class are wavering about colleges for next year. We'll go our separate ways in different schools with varied aims, but we still have one thought in common: we're all hoping for good education instead of quality education."

In 1929 Russia blacklisted Sherlock Holmes for his "disgraceful occultism and spiritualism." In 1931 China banned ALICE IN WONDERLAND on the ground that "animals should not use human language" and that it was "disastrous to put animals and human beings on the same level."
