Furman To Hold Summer Program For Juniors

High school juniors may get a taste of college life in a fiveweek summer college prep program schedued June 12 through July 1 at Furman University at Greenville, S. C.

High school juniors must apply no later than April 15 for the chance to study and live on the Furman campus in the university's eighth annual program of summer work for high school students who want to improve their chances of success in col-

The program is designed to give students a challenging intellectual experience which will complement their high school work and help them discover their academic strengths and weaknesses. The summer program will be valuable to high school students in preparing for college. Not only will they have an opportunity to increase their knowledge but also experience living together in dormitories and working among a group of equaly capable young people.

Students participating in the college prep program will receive special assistance in both academic and personal counsel-

Evening seminars, lectures, discussion groups, panels, movies and social activities will be important features of the five-week

Some scholarships are available for the summer program and applications should be made as early as possible. Scholarship application forms and admission forms are available through high school guidance counselors or by writing Dean of Students, Furman University, Greenville, S.C.

Student Exchange And Leadership Day Occupy Greensboro Student Council

"Communication channels" was the topic of the March 1, Greensboro Student Council meeting hosted by GHS. Mayor Sam Melvin spoke about the need for students, teachers, and administrators to better understand each other via better "communication channels."

The business discussion centered in the ideas of Student Exchange and Student Leadership Day, both of which were proposed by the Student Affairs Council of GHS. All four city high schools, represented by 3 students and its assistant principal, seemed to favor these ideas as conducive actions to better relations among the four senior high schools.

According to the GHS proposal, the "Student Leadership Day gives an opportunity for our students to take an active part in the educational process at school. By having students lead the class, they will better understand and appreciate the difficulties of teaching, and this will serve to establish better relationships between teachers and students, as well as providing an excellent opportunity for student leadership training."

The Leadership Day will call for students to take the place of the teachers and administrators. All student appointments will be made by teachers, individual classes, and administrators. School policies will continue to be in effect for students during the

"Equal representation" will be the key to the Student Exchange program which will allow 4 sophomores, 4 juniors, and 4 seniors (from each class there will be 2 blacks, 2 whites, one boy, and one girl of each race) to visit other schools and attend the same classes in which the exchange students from that school would normally attend.

The purpose of this unique rendezvous was to bring a selected group of kids into the heart of American government and politics by offering them a rare opportunity to hear real government officials and politicians tell it like it is. This step into the nerve center of "where it's at"-Washington, D.C.-constitutes "A Presidential Classroom for Young Americans."

Two GHS students, Rorin Platt and Jim Rouse, enjoyed this politic odyssey between Feb. 12-26.

The seven day program was presented through lectures, panel discussions, quetion and answer sessions, seminars, tours, and informal rap sessions.

Highlights of the program included religion services and tours at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington National Cathedral, and the Mosque. Sunday's activities concluded with a tour of Washington, including Lincoln Memorial, Jefferson Memorial, Washington Monument, and Arlington Cemetary (JFK's and RFK's gravesites).

Monday thru Thursday provided the following excursions: visits with Congressmen and Senators in their offices; seeing the House and Senate in session as well as viewing legislative committee in action; White House tour; visits to the Justice Dept. and State Dept. Some of the distinguished speakers included Senator Ted Stevens of Alaska, Congressmen Jerome Waldie of California and Pierre du Pont of Delaware, Brig. Gen. Robert D. Bohn, USMC, Asst. Deputy Chief of Staff (Programs), and Oleg Sokolov, Soviet Ambassador to the USA.

The climax of the week occurred on Friday. Students were allowed four hours of free time (downtown Washington, Georgetown, the Capitol, and CIA hqts.).

The evening provided a banquet at the Kennedy Center where Congressman Walter Fauntroy was the guest speaker. Cong. Fauntroy closed his address with a solo "To Dream the Impossible Dream."

"Lost in the Stars," an opera based on Cry, the Beloved Country, was given in the Kennedy Opera House. A graduation dance was held at the Shoreham Hotel, the familiar home of 280 weary young people.
