

Students Invited To Take UNC-G Courses

GREENSBORO — Junior and senior high school students from across the Piedmont are being invited to take freshman level courses this summer at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Dr. Herbert Wells, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs at UNC-G, said rising high school juniors and seniors who are recommended by their principal or school counselor will be admitted to the UNC-G Summer Session as visiting students.

"Any credits they earn will be put in a bank, in a sense," explained Dr. Wells. "Such credits can later be applied toward their degree requirements if they subsequently decide to enroll at UNC-G on a fulltime basis after graduating from high school."

UNC-G's first term of summer school will open June 5, and continue through July 11. The second term will open July 13 and run through Aug. 17. Registration dates are June 4 and July 12, respectively. No Saturday classes are involved in either term.

Rising juniors and seniors in high school who are interested in the program can obtain further information by contacting Dr. Wells' office at UNC-G. To register, students need to make application to the UNC-G Summer Session Office prior to the registration date. Such students will need a transcript of their grades and a letter from their high school principal or school counselor.

A flat fee of $45 is charged each term to residents of North Carolina to enroll in Summer Session, plus a $21.50 registration fee.

Dr. Wells explained that high school students will be accepted only as day students because campus housing will not be available to them.

He emphasized that the courses being offered in this program are not in competition with high school studies. "I would see it, instead, as a reflection of the good job the high schools are doing in preparing kids for college work sooner than has normally been the case."

Rising juniors and seniors in high school will be permitted to register for selected courses during the Summer Session in the following areas of study: art, business, economics, chemistry, classical civilization, drama, speech, English, geography, German, health, history, math, music, nursing, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, religious studies, French, Spanish, sociology and anthropology.

Dr. Wells added, "If a student has real talent in a given area, those courses might well keep his interest from stagnating before he gets to college.

"It's also an opportunity for high school students to get started on their college work and perhaps get a feel for what college level work is like."

In some instances, perhaps a newly graduated high school senior would like to get a couple of required courses out of the way before he or she enters college in the fall, noted Dr. Wells. "This would give the student more flexibility later," he explained.

"Clearly, one of our aims is to sell the students on enrolling at UNC-G," he stated. "But we believe this program will give high school students a taste of college work which will benefit them wherever they go."

A fast Beach-Weekend getaway is squelched.

Summer Activities

GYC Begins Summer Session

Summer will be filled with many fun and informative activities as the Greensboro Youth Council kicks off another busy season.

Recreational sports leagues are now being formed for a summer competition. Under the direction of Carol Osborne teams for volleyball and soccer are now being formed. Any group of people may form a team. Contact the youth Council office for the details. Badminton will also have a singles tournament, and plans for a Par Three Ladies' Golf Tournament are in the final stages. Other sports are also being planned.

Teenage Night at the Barn is August 13. Play and meal will be coordinated by the Youth Council. This is an exciting, entertaining, and inexpensive night on the town featuring many local students.

GYC is planning several weekly concerts. Tentative plans for local bands and bigger bands are being made. The concerts will be held in the War Memorial Auditorium.

The annual Leadership Workshop will be held again this summer. This gives local and outstanding students an opportunity to learn and practice leadership ideals, programs, and control.

A movie is now being planned and produced by the Greensboro Youth Council for incoming college students. It is to help orient students from out of town to the opportunities and locations in and around the city.

GYC will continue to produce their weekly television and radio shows throughout the summer. "Gap," heard on WCOG, and "Main Point" will continue to produce high quality entertainment throughout the summer for the Greensboro people.

A project similar to the Neighborhood Youth Corps is now in the final stages of preparation. Nancy Snavely, a Page senior, is the chairman for this project.

Other projects to benefit Greensboro will be planned and concluded during this busy summer session of the Greensboro Youth Council.

Whirligig Announces Next Year's Editor

Whirligig staff is looking past this year to next year with a few surprises in store.

Also, Miss Virginia Powell plans to retire after years as the Whirligig advisor. She will be replaced by Mrs. Rachel Morton.

A new approach to senior portraits may be initiated next year. Environmental (casual) portraits may be taken to give the book a more individual appeal.

Next year's staff was able to get a real insight into the year-book-making process when they visited the DelMar company of Charlotte on April 5 and toured the plant. Although they saw none of the actual Whirligig being put together, they learned a lot about printing yearbooks.

Congratulations Seniors
