Communications System Underway

GCS, the Grimsley Communications' System, has gotten well underway with three meetings to date--October 10, October 23, and November 6.

The first meeting consisted mainly of the use of one of several "Ice-breaking" exercises for each group. The purpose of this exercise was to orientate the students in each of the 95 groups with their teacher leader, two student-leaders, and with each other. Opinions of the first session ranged from apathy and skepticism to that of general success for such an innovative project.

Meeting number two revealed an exercise pertaining to practicing discriminating listening skills by asking each member of the individual group to share clues with other members for the purpose of solving a murder mystery. This meeting appeared to be better received than the first through a general poll.

Then the third meeting offered a topic concerning decision-making. School Beautiful was discussed through the six steps of the decision-making process: 1. Define the situation. 2. Make a value judgement about the situation. 3. Can it be changed? 4. Define where you are and where you want to be. 5. Plan to do something about it. 6. Make a commitment to that plan.
