Attention rising juniors and seniors: South Carolina Clown College is offering a seven-week summer program in pie dynamics and seltzer water. Interested students should see Mr. Hands for an application.

This week Grimsley's Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) will be participating in the 5th Annual High school Frown-Off. Proceeds will benefit Prozac research.

The debate team participated in another competition last week, but the event was postponed when the competition was brought to a standstill when someone posed the question "Got Milk?"

Students are reminded that once again this year the Garbage and Trash club has invited the Greensboro Bee Swarm to Grimsley this spring. They would like to thank all the lazy and pathetic Whirlies who made their arrival possible.

Any students interested in the Worthless Hole in the Ground Club should meet by the flag pole Thursday after school. This year's projects will include the auxillary gym, the tennis courts, and Page Senior High School.

Mrs. Teague has announced that starting next Monday, students will be encouraged to wear hats in the building, along with overalls and comfortable shoes as Grimsley will begin its week long "Paint the Main Building to Save Money!" celebration. Brushes will be provided.

A message from your Friendly SRO: We can see you, always!

Ms. Green announced today that in an effort to save time, the answer to all inquiries is "Absolutely not. I repeat, absolutely not."

Starting next week, the Exchangettes will be selling friendship, compassion, and sympathy in various amounts until next Friday. Interested students should see Mrs. Thorne-Peoples or their Exchangette representative. If you don't get help from the Exchangettes, please get help somewhere.

Screen legend enrolls at Grimsley

By The Wet Bandits

"Aaaaaaaaahhhhh!"

Anyone and everyone who has been at Grimsley lately has noticed there's a definite buzz in the air--and it's not just horrific swarms of bees or the mundane hum of the useless ceiling fans--something big is happening. Students have excitedly whispered rumors in classrooms, and one question has been on every Whirlie's mind: Is Silver Screen legend Macauley Culkin coming to our beloved high school?

The answer was made official this week--a resounding "Yessir!" The dramatic master will be attending our humble haven starting in two weeks.

During the filming of his greatest works--the psychological thriller "Home Alone," and the lighthearted science fiction classic "Home Alone 2," Culkin was unable to earn a high school diploma with the top-notch tutors Warner Brothers provided him. "When you're filming a flick as intense and demanding as "Home Alone" you have a hard time concentrating on anything else, especially schoolwork," said the excited film star. So after two years of soul searching and a brief stint on "Hollywood Squares" in the prestigious middle position, Culkin decided to come back to high school and finish his education.

"It wasn't that I missed school or nothin', just nowadays most fast food restaurants say a fella needs to pass pre-algebra, and I never got over that hill," said the newest Whirlie.

Junior Adam Berman agreed to be Macauley Culkin's guide during his first day on campus. Culkin requested a guide because of his fear of being left alone.

So now Macauley is just like any other high school freshman: he takes six classes a day and also plans to get involved early and often in school activities. "My social worker says they are good," concluded Culkin. The star will sing with the Madrigals and throw the javelin for the track and field team.

Of course the other question on everyone's mind has to be whether or not the legend of stage and screen will be performing in any of Grimsley's dramas. "I'd love to work again, but at this point I mainly want to focus on staying out of trouble and working on this tough 500 piece puzzle I got for my birthday," he said.

Macauley has said the process of deciding on a high school to finish his education was a fairly short one: "I wanted a school with a good academic record, little or no air conditioning, and a lot of water fountains; I loooooove water." Culkin also considered Page High School, but could not attend. Apparently, the school had already filled its quota for mindless seatfillers.

All in all, Culkin is looking forward to a bright future at Grimsley. "The way I see it, Rhode Island is neither a road, nor an island - know what I mean?"

We certainly do, Macauley, we certainly do.

What's your sign?

Tipping the Scales

Encouraged by the success of their "Wash Your Hands" program, the AP sign-making class has decided to expand their horizons. "We just decided that if we can help people with their hygiene, there's no limit to what we can do," says a sophomore, who enrolled in the class after hearing countless colleges requesting at least two years of it.

A junior says, "Well, after we had done so well with the hand-washing thing, we figured the next logical step would be to work on the student parking lot." Whirlies may have noticed the "Take Off Your Emergency Brake" signs lining each parking space. The class is also studying to make a "Use Your Clutch When You Change Gears" sign, which students can expect to see sometime after Spring Break.

Some of the underclassmen in the standard sign-making class are putting up signs in student lockers. Two of the most popular ones to date are "Close Your Locker" and "Get Your English Book." Student praise for these locker signs has been overwhelming. One sophomore says "Who the @#$% do they think they are, my @%$#@# mother?" A junior adds, "How the %#@& did these #@%$#@# break into my $#%^&@%$ locker?"

As the end of the third quarter approaches, the AP students have decided they need to go back to what they started on. "If it wasn't for the bathroom campaign, we never would have enjoyed this kind of success," says one of the leading officers in the class. And so they are now beginning to place their "Pull Up Your Pants" signs on the inner doors of stalls. Although the advice may seem elementary, one staff member in the English department speaks in its defense: "You know, especially now that my head is filled with essays, homework, exams, and a lot of things and, well, sometimes I just forget, and that's when . . . that's when I'm glad we have the sign-making program here at Northeast, I mean Grimsley."

Attendance policy

from life's other side and play the part of the naïve, neglectful administrator for awhile."

Mr. Sourpuss agrees with his co-board member, Ms. Touchstone, when he says, "I agree with my co-board member, Ms. Touchstone. You're right, that wasn't so hard to say. Now where's my money?"

Life at Grimsley promises to be far more luxurious under the new attendance policy. Perhaps Jimmy Whimpers, a sophomore, captures student jubilation best when he says, "I've been whining about this and that for fifteen and a half years now. It's about time somebody listened up and started catering to my every want and need!"
