We all love Ben & Jerry's ice cream, but how much would we love it if instead of using cow's milk in their ice cream, the company switched to breast milk? At the insistence of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), the environmentalist group known for its eccentric ideas and advertisements, Ben & Jerry's will be replacing the cow's milk in their 30+ flavors of ice cream with donated breast milk.

Due to some speculation surrounding the decision, PETA and Ben & Jerry's have released a joint statement explaining the reasoning behind such a radical move.

"Breast milk is a terrific source of proteins, fats, vitamins, and carbohydrates, which are essential for growing children. Replacing the milk in the ice cream with breast milk will make for healthier ice cream, and parents will not feel as bad about letting their children consume ice cream. This change in the recipe may also help prevent cruelty to dairy cows," said the PETA and Ben & Jerry's representative.

With PETA's success at Ben and Jerry's, the organization is attempting to spread this idea elsewhere, including Cold Stone Creamery, Carvel, Dairy Queen, and Edy's. Sources say that these other popular ice cream brands are seriously considering following suit.

Interested parties can soon donate milk to PETA, which assures the public they will sponsor donation sites across the country.

Yes, girls, summer is well on its way, but why should we sacrifice our dignity to wear glitzy bathing suits and bear our midriffs? If we should at all be changing the dress code, we should make it so that lime green is the only color students are permitted to wear. Better yet, girls should wear the neon green, and boys should wear bright purple so that when the two are mixing, it is easy to sight inappropriate touching.

Students should be required to have seasonal outfits, so that during the spring, girls' outfits should be tapered, high-waisted pants with extralong, oversized tank tops. These will discourage boys from flirting with them. In the summertime, girls should wear only thin pantaloons, allowing the cool breeze to refresh them, along with pirate shirts with puffy sleeves, so they look like fabulous lime-green pirates. In winter, girls' clothing should consist of long skirts and voluminous, fluffy down coats.

Boys should wear vivid purple footy pajamas year-round, but with a different animal theme each month. For example, in April, a very spring-like month, the boys' pajamas will be bunnies because bunnies love spring! December will be polar bears, who thrive in the cold weather!

It's getting warmer outside, and we girls just do not want to wear clothes. Why should we be forced to wear fingertip length shorts or "appropriate" tops when bikinis are so much more comfortable? We feminists want to feel freer and less restricted while still being comfortable in the heat. This fashion statement is one that's practical and stylish.

One statement that is not practical or stylish, however, is obnoxious 80's colors like neon green and purple. In the winter, we usually bundle ourselves in layers of garishly colored and unflattering clothing, so now we girls only want to wear clothes that can show off our pretty skin. We just want to let ourselves be seen! Bikinis and cover-up dresses with a few pairs of cute high-heeled flip-flops are all we need in our summer wardrobe.

When winter rolls around again, summertime wardrobe staples will look just as cute when paired with a furry orange hat with earflaps. Winter's chilly temperatures usually encourage bulky layers and frumpy clothing, but the fashion industry is proposing a change: wear your summer clothes all year round, with the adorable addition of orange fur on everything. This trend will keep you warm and fashionable.
