Fans and performers of the hip-hop world saw one of the greatest groundbreaking events in music history this past weekend, when Lil Wayne of Young Money and Cash Money record companies announced that the Young Money family had, in fact, become a literal family.

Federal Judge Courtney Robely Bench confirmed that members of the clan, known for recording songs mainly with each other, signed adoption papers to legalize their relationship as siblings. Bryan "Birdman" Williams adopted Dwayne Carter, Jr., Onika Minaj, and Aubrey Graham, and the rest of the artists signed with Carter's Young Money label as his children.

The new Williams clan issued a statement claiming they are looking forward to living, working, and eating dinner together. Drake told his fans via Twitter that this new family will provide the basis for most of his new songs and that lyrics will focus almost solely on his brothers and sisters.

"I'll keep it fresh and try not to repeat lines or phrases," said Drake.

Look out, world, for togas are back as Greek style sweeps the nation. Socrates, Plato and Aristotle are returning to share their philosophical queries of what wearing a toga really means including the ups, downs, and symbolical references to politics.

Did you know that wearing a toga makes you smarter and a more fantastic person to be around? The ceremonial re-cloning will commence at Xerxes' Pavilion on December 36, 1845 at 15:30 a.m., Northwestern Standard Time on the Moon. For directions, please contact Moon Man Johnson on Facebook.

"Life on Earth will be much better with togas because they will present an even more united world. Everyone will be the same," said Aristotle to scientist Smithy Johnston, who has cloned and revived the famous philosopher in the past.

Also slated to attend are Plato and Socrates who will explain their philosophies on the world's repulsions and the idea that one day technology will be dead, plants will take over the world, and biological malfunctions will curse the world with an abrupt ending.

Tinky the Moon Elf stated that construction for the new world in space is set to begin at 11:11 a.m. during the month of May during one of the daily worship services to the no longer existing moon Pluto. Mass shipments of togas will begin circulation in early December to assure that when the famous philosophers arrive, surroundings will appear just as they would have liked them to be from eons ago.

Due to unexplained circumstances, the philosophers may die or become combustible and explode because of current air pressures of 5% upon arrival. Everyone is cautioned to wear synthetic fabrics just because.

Elizabeth the Strangling Cat strikes again in Greensboro. Eve Jell Resinut, 17, was reported dead in her home on the morning of February 20, 2011 by her butler, Humphrey, who claims to have witnessed the incident.

After several hours of questioning, detective Easton released the following statement to the press: "Although Mr. Humphrey has been fully cooperative with my department, we have made no progress because about three hours into questioning, we realized that he was, in fact, a dog very well trained to serve as a butler; he won't stop barking."

Police declared this murder to be the work of Elizabeth Fluffball after the autopsy found cat hairs in her mouth, nose, and lungs. Only recently have they been able to explain this bizarre insignia.

"Well, as far as we can tell from the past murders, the Strangling Cat waits for her prey to fall asleep and then latches onto their faces with her paws until the victims suffocate. She occasionally burps intentionally as well so they suffocate sooner," said Easton.

Although Fluffball's whereabouts are currently unknown, local authorities suggest citizens stay home and lock their windows and doors.

Since his rise to fame, many critics have wondered if Justin Beeburr is actually a girl. His high-pitched voice, song lyrics, and haircut suggest there might be some truth to this statement. Now his stylist reveals a shocking secret about Beeburr.

"Justin has wanted to be female for a long time and will soon get his wish. He will begin the process of becoming Jessica Beeburr in July of 2011," said Angela Snitchie.

According to Beeburr's family members, Justin played with Barbie Dolls when he was a child instead of GI-Joes and cap guns. Beeburr even had a temper tantrum when he was seven because he did not receive the Holiday Barbie for Christmas. His other favorite toy was a box full of sparkly dress-up clothes. He devoted almost three hours every day to playing dress up with his sisters, aunts, and mother.

"We thought he was just trying to fit into the family since there were so many girls, but as he grew older and began to use makeup, it was apparent this was not just a phase he was going through," said Justin's mother Lauren Beeburr.

Justin has been trying very hard since he hit the pop charts with a high pitched note to repress his feminine tendencies but was simply unable to do it. Recently, during a rehearsal when his voice began to crack and grow deeper, Justin experienced a breakdown during a rehearsal because he realized how much he hated being a boy. That moment was the turning point when Beeburr decided to become a girl physically to match his mental sexuality.

After his sex change, the new Jessica Beeburr will join Gady Lala on her hypnotic tour of America's hottest stages. Justin has already written the first song he will sing as a female entertainer with Gady Lala, a remake of the song "Man! I Feel Like a Woman!"
