

Speakout!

What was your 2012 New Year's resolution, and have you already broken it?

"My New Year's resolution was to start exercising more. I haven't broken it because I joined a gym, but actually, I've yet to go"

Rowan Hathaway, junior

"Focus in class, and stay away from my phone during school time... I couldn't even make it into second period."

Melissa Giron, senior

"To be nice to my parents. I've already broken it! Self-explanatory."

Madison Boyette, sophomore

"I didn't set any New Year's resolutions because I met all of them last year. Now all I have to work on is to stop being a pathological liar!"

Cindy Underwood, counseling

"To perfect my driving skills and to one day reach my goal of driving in the 2016 Olympics in Brazil. No, I have not broken it."

Jesse Hoggard, senior

"To live life to the fullest times ten plus one thousand. No, I have not broken it."

Defrece Caskey, senior

"My New Year's resolution was to stop eating Chik-Fil-A because of its very open funding of anti-gay foundations, but I broke that quite quickly because their chicken is so good."

Jessica Munro, senior

"My New Year's resolution is to enjoy life more. I have not broken it yet. I am a happy person, but I want to be even happier! When I am happy, my friends around me are happy, which is always a good thing."

Hannah Young, junior
