THANKSGIVING HOLIDAY SEASON SPECIAL

Africa Has New AIDS Treatment

Amidst all the renewed discussion about AIDS and how to treat the disease that has no cure, the Western media is ignoring two drugs that African doctors are using with success. See page 3.

Giving Credit To The Indians

Thanksgiving celebrations should reflect on the role that native American Indians played in the original feast and the shameful treatment they have received over the years, says Lateefah Razzak in "Today's Teens," page 4.

"Magic's" Moral Dilemma

The recent revelation by Magic Johnson has caused people to rethink their lifestyles. But, while more research and education are needed, what is needed more is a return to sound, moral values, says Sam Davis, Phoenix General Manager on page 10.

Taking Proactive Insurance

Blacks are most often affected when jobs are eliminated and should be about the business of preparing themselves for change, according to Phoenix Publisher, Rodney Sumler on page 10.

On The Cover....

Poultry farmer, Willard Hauser, delights in preparing some of his birds for the Thanksgiving feasts of his friends, while Nikki Stephenson, age 3, and Latrice Norwood, also age 3, are not so sure they want turkey for dinner. Photo by L.B. Speas Jr.
