Winston-Salem Bible College Sponsors Unique Outreach Program

By Don Young

On Saturday evening, December 13, a unique program was sponsored by the Winston-Salem Bible College in Rembert, South Carolina. The program was organized by Don Young, President of Winston-Salem Bible College. Three churches from Ohio and two churches in Sumter, South Carolina came together for a huge community Christmas Party held in Station 8 Fire House located in Rembert. Santa was there with toys and gifts for all the children, food boxes were distributed to each family, clothing and housewares distributed along with a variety of bedding supplies and other personal items.

This unique community event was the perfect example of racial reconciliation. Of the two churches from Sumter, one was African American and the other Caucasian. The three churches from Ohio were Church of Christ, Christian Church, and Christian Union. The sponsoring Bible College was an African American institution.

The event was coordinated by the local postmaster and endorsed by the Sumter County Fire Service.

This program was a pilot program of reconciliation. It involved African American and Caucasian, urban and suburban, north and south, secular and sacred, and of course children and adults from every conceivable socio-economic strata. A colossal success, this particular program will be modified and replicated proving that we are a people who can work together for the common good of mankind.

This endeavor proved that there are ethical and tangible ways to bridge the chasm between church and state as well as similar chasms between all sectors of our culture.

Don Young is the new President of Winston-Salem Bible College. He began his tenure at the college in August 2003. Since then WSBC has begun to recreate its 53 year old program. In addition to courses leading to degrees in Bible Studies at the college, WSBC will offer online courses in the fall, to reach students unable to come to the campus, adult college completion programs and certificate programs. The college, under his direction, will also play a more active role in the Winston-Salem community and communities abroad. This outreach ministry is in keeping with the college's mission to better educate Christian leaders. The new motto of the college is "Preparing Real People for a Real Ministry in a Real World."
