

Justice Timmons-Goodson running statewide to keep her N.C. Supreme Court seat

Court's only African American on statewide ballot Nov. 7th

Justice Patricia Timmons-Goodson is on the statewide ballot November 7 to keep her seat on the N.C. Supreme Court.

She is currently the only African American on the state's highest court, and is the only African American running for statewide judicial office this year.

Appointed to the Supreme Court in January by Governor Mike Easley, Timmons-Goodson will serve a full eight-year term if elected in November.

"I respectfully and prayerfully ask for your vote to keep me on the Supreme Court of North Carolina," said Justice Timmons-Goodson. "and I thank you for your consideration and your support."

Timmons-Goodson brings more than 21 years of judicial experience to the Supreme Court, more than any other candidate for Associate Justice. She started her long career as a prosecutor and a legal aid lawyer in Cumberland County.

She was appointed by Governor Jim Hunt to the District Court bench in 1984. She was elected to that position three times - in 1986, 1990 and 1994.

She served on the District Court bench for twelve and one-half years before going to the state Court of Appeals, where she served for eight and one-half years. She was the first African-American woman to be popularly elected to the state appellate court.

The Supreme Court Justice has been married for 21 years to Dr. Ernest Goodson, a Fayetteville orthodontist. They are the proud parents of two teenage sons. The Goodsons are active members of First Baptist Church, Moore Street, in Fayetteville.

Last three African Americans To run for Court lost

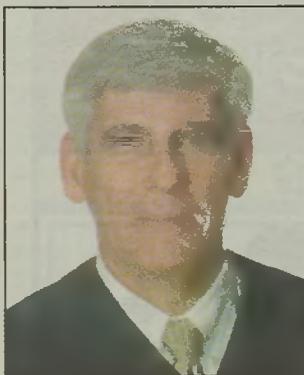

The last three African Americans who ran for election to the state Supreme Court lost their statewide elections.

It is important that this does not happen to Justice Patricia Timmons-Goodson in 2006!

Justice Timmons-Goodson is the fourth African American to actually serve on the Supreme Court, but only former Chief Justice Henry Frye of Greensboro was ever elected by voters in a statewide election to the position. Justice Frye was defeated in his bid in 2000 to keep his seat as Chief Justice. Justices Jim Wynn and G. K. Butterfield were appointed to the Supreme Court, but were unsuccessful in their elections.

Justice Timmons-Goodson is the only member of the Supreme Court who is African American. If elected in November, she would be the first African-American woman ever elected to the state's highest court!
