

Avon Players To Be Here

"Othello" and "Hamlet" Will Be Presented

Special Student Prices Arranged
Players Sponsored by Kappa
Omicron

The dramatic event of the season is scheduled for April 10, in our own auditorium when the famous Avon Players will present the equally famous Shakespearean plays, "Othello" and "Hamlet." This announcement is the result of a conference between Mr. Joseph Selman, star and personal agent of the company, and Dr. Stout, head of the English department here, concerning the possibility of bringing so eminent and desirable a company as the nationally-known Avon Players to Queens-Chicora. After some consideration Kappa Omicron, our honorary English fraternity, agreed to undertake the presentation of these players, a service for which the college and community is greatly indebted.

This group of Avon Players is one of the few professional companies on tour. They have survived because they offer the very best in spoken drama. They present, according to Dean N. M. Salley of Florida State College for Women, "something really artistic in legitimate drama," and Dr. Stewart of the University of Georgia further enhances their value by saying that "their one performance is the equivalent of a six months class room study." The Atlanta Constitution is quoted: "The Avon Players brought Shakespearean characters to life. All members of the cast interpreted their roles admirably."

The entire cast of the Avon Players is composed of experienced actors.

Freshmen Win Queens-Blues Prize

A prize of $5 will go to the freshmen, as winners of the Queens Blues contest between the freshmen and sophomore classes. According to the decision of three judges the freshmen received 88 1/3 points out of a possibility of 100 and the sophomores only 80.

Congratulations are due to Ione Smith, editor and Fritz Raley, business manager, as well as to their co-workers.

The papers were judged according to timeliness, quality and extent of interest, structure, accuracy, make-up, editorial, headlines, feature articles and advertisements.

Former Star To Be Seen Here

Joseph Selman, Broadway star, will be seen and heard on the stage of the Queens-Chicora auditorium April 10, when he makes his appearance here with the Avon players. He is not only famous on Broadway, but is nationally known and honored on account of his years of successful concert tours.

At the age of 16, Selman got his start on the concert stage with the well-known Townsend family. He showed such marked ability that Mrs. Fiske offered him a part with her in "Merchant of Venice." This was the first of a long series of successful performances with the Fiske company from which he went to play under George M. Cohen, playmaker of all time. Now, in the prime of life, Selman owns and plays in the well-known company that will be presented here soon.

Students Inspired By Missionary Talk

Miss Manget To Return

Last week Miss Elizabeth Manget, perhaps better known as Lib, visited our campus in behalf of Student Volunteer work carried on here. Year before last Miss Manget was president of the N. C. Union of Student Volunteers; last year she completed her course at Duke as a chemistry major; and this year she is the traveling secretary for the South Atlantic Region of the above national organization.

Having been born and reared in China, Miss Manget gave us an excellent picture of that country and its needs. Indeed these needs call for more than military force of mere civilization! Of America's best, what can we offer her today as a sure antidote for her suffering? Miss Manget stressed the need for a world outlook reaching over the Far Horizon, so that humanity may understand the Christian way of living.

Opportunity was given for personal interviews during the two days of Miss Manget's visit; this privilege will be ours again on April 13, Thursday. Any students wishing to take advantage of this time for counsel along any lines of missionary interest, work or preparation, etc., see Florence Moffett and arrange for your date with Miss Manget.

Museum of Art Presents Exhibit

Little Theatre Sponsors Tapestry Lecturer

An unusual opportunity was offered the public on March 28 at the Little Theatre of Charlotte. Miss Alexander, representative of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, lectured and showed pictures of the progress and science of tapestry making. Charlotte, including many girls from Queens-Chicora, showed great delight in such cultural revivals. Many were interested further by Miss Alexander's free instruction in this fascinating art during the time she was here. In her display were needle point designs of all kinds and wools for working them, secured through the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Expert advice was given regarding designs and the use of the following types of period furniture: Heppelwhite, Chippendale, Sheraton and Georgian. This last bit of instruction proved particularly helpful to the home-planning class.

Noted Lecturer Speaks At College

Cameron Beck Has Vital Message For Youth

A new message is being brought to the high school and college students of the United States who have the privilege to hear Cameron Beck, personnel director of the New York Stock Exchange. The students here listened attentively to his messages last Friday morning and evening when he spoke in the college auditorium.

Out of a wide experience with every type of people Mr. Beck was able to place new value upon the "old-fashioned" virtues of integrity, honesty, and cleanliness. Mr. Beck preaches a gospel of work, the doing of "common tasks uncommonly well."

To future teachers Mr. Beck advocated the understanding heart, which is one of the greatest influences in the school life of a child. Perseverance and a passion for right living are among those qualities which he said will count for success in life. In words of advice and encouragement, delivered with refreshing enthusiasm, Mr. Beck challenged the future student to consider a plan and a purpose in life.

Five students are attending the Alpha Kappa Gamma convention, which is meeting at the University of South Carolina, April 7-8.

Dramatic Recital Shows Great Talent

Four dramatic students performed last Monday evening at 8:30, when they gave their annual recital. The students showed much talent and training.

Jeanette Rogers gave a one-act play, "Gretna Green," and two other short selections. Sadie Gilbert read a group of short poems expressing sympathy and animation and recited Eugene Field's delightful poem, "Winking, Blinking, and No." Josephine Dandridge rendered three pianologues, the first of which was dedicated to the Queens-Chicora girls. Clare Hazel brilliantly portrayed the characters in Sir James Barrie's play, "The Twelve Pound Look."
