

RAMBLING WITH MADAM QUEEN

Is it possible that every person has only two thumbs? Even you would have asked that question had you passed the college corner last Saturday. A crowd of our girls were there bumming their way down town to do some Christmas shopping. I know this, because I happened to play good Samaritan to about one-fourth of them.

As we drove along, our noisy chatter turned into questions of where each of us was going. I answered my interrogator that Lib and I were going to the Carolina to see "Dancing Lady." This led to a discussion of a picture we all had seen at the Criterion featuring David Manners.

Mary Lindsay said she had missed "Song of Songs," when it was here, but she planned to see it at the Charlotte Monday.

All piled out at the square, and as I watch them scatter north, east, south and west, I wished I could accompany each of them to see all the things she would buy to make someone happy.

After I had parked the car, Lib and I walked to the Carolina. We were told at the ticket office that no upstairs seats were available. That's always the way at the Carolina for everyone loves to go there. We decided to go shopping until the five o'clock show.

In front of Luceille's we met the Hubbards, who were admiring a coat in the window. Mary said she thought Luceille's had some of the best looking clothes that she had ever seen. We all agreed.

The streets were crowded with enthusiastic shoppers, a sight which always thrills me. Everyone was hurrying from place to place with his arms filled with packages. Often one was pushed against another, and I happened to run into a lady who was carrying a box of flowers from Hunter's Floral Shop. I knew at once that this wise lady was planning to make her family happy with flowers for Christmas. While we were looking at a pair of bedroom slippers in Purcell's window, Ruth Grover came out wearing a scarf and tam set that she had just bought.

Across the street we bumped into Frances Scruggs. She surely did look nice. When we remarked on her outfit, she laughed and said she liked best of all her shoes, that she had just bought at Pollock's. I knew how she felt for I always like shoes bought there; not only for their beauty, but also for their comfort and lasting quality.

As we walked down the street whom should we meet but Miriam Story, wearing an outfit that would put Joan Crawford to shame. According to Miriam there's no place like the DARLING SHOP for chic and style.

Just in front of Efir's, Martha Petteway appeared on the horizon wearing a lapin jacket. She confessed to us that Santa Claus had promised her one of Efir's fur coats for being a good girl.

We spent the most time in Smith-Wadsworth for everything we saw we wanted. We made several purchases and were as satisfied with them as we could be.

In front of the Carolina we met Jean Porter, who showed us a fountain pen and pencil set that she had bought for her brother at Pound and Moore. Lucky brother!

After the show, we went to the "Little Store" for a dope as we always do. I asked Roye Greene if the suit he was wearing were new. He laughed and said that National Dry Cleaners always made his clothes look that way.

In reading this over I notice that I have mentioned places that advertise in the Queen's Blues! I'm proud that our girls are patronizing those who help us. Truly, the Christmas spirit I'd say.

Sponsored by the Sophomore Class, the University of South Carolina Glee Club, Maurice Matteson, director, made its initial appearance at Queens-Chicora College Tuesday evening, December 12.

From the opening number through to the finish, the singing of the young men not only came up to, but exceeded expectations. They showed most careful, conscientious training and rendered a program of diversity and unusual merit.

A feature of their program was the manuscript group consisting of jolly, lilting spirituals, mountain folk songs, and a fine rollicking song of the sea, all especially arranged for and dedicated to the Glee Club.

Alumna Meeting

The alumna meeting of Queens College was held December 7, at the home of Mrs. Mason Wallace on the Monroe Road.

The principal speaker was Dr. Elizabeth Blair, who spoke on "The New Leisure as a Challenge to Liberal Arts Colleges." After the speech Miss Catherine McCracken and Miss Margaret McGuire, both of North Carolina College for Women at Greensboro, gave a music recital.

During the business meeting a letter of acknowledgment from the secretary of the day students, Marie Wilkenson was read. This letter was written in acknowledgment for the $111.61 which the alumnae had spend of the Day Student House in furniture and painting.

Socials

Gamma Gamma chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta Fraternity pledged five girls in their chapter house on Tuesday evening, November 28. The new pledges are: Dorothy Cathran, Dorothy Senn, and Nell Barnharde. The following were re-pledged: Margaret Clegg and Margaret Jones.

The Delta Gamma chapter of Chi Omega announces the pledging of Katherine Crowell, Dec. 10, 1933, in their chapter house on Sorority Row.

The Theta Gamma chapter of Chi Omega honored Mrs. Robert Selby at their Sunday night feed, November 26. Following a supper course served by Virginia Sampson, Julia and Henrietta Henderson, Mrs. Selby, formerly Elizabeth Shelton, was presented with a silver cake knife.

Miss Ann Foyssaux Johnston, of Barium Springs, N. C., and national inspector of Kappa Delta Sorority, was guest last week of Alpha Omricon chapter of Kappa Delta. Miss Johnston is a graduate of Queens College, having finished in '29. She was very outstanding in college activities while a student here, holding many offices in addition to being president of the local chapter of Kappa Delta and also May Queen.

The house was decorated with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums, giving a note of thanksgiving, which was carried out in the favors.

Tea, sandwiches and cakes were served by Margaret Floyd, Beulah Des Champs, Martha Sue Simmons, and Sara Escatt.

Miss McLean, Mrs. A. F. Redd, and Miss Mable Murphy were special guests.

Honorary Fraternities

Phi Beta Chi

Phi Beta Chi sponsored an interesting lecture on "Liquid Air," by J. S. Sloan, on December 8. Mr. Sloan demonstrated how we may drive a nail with a mercury hammer made by liquid air, how we may fry an egg in this air, several combustion experiments, and many other instructive experiments. This demonstration was well attended, especially by members of the science department.

Choral Club

The Choral Club has been meeting every night to practice for the annual recital of Christmas music to be held on Sunday, December 17th, at 4:00 o'clock. This promises to be an enjoyable entertainment to which the public is cordially invited.

Classical Club

The Classical Club will meet December 19. The subject of the program will be "Roman Holidays," and be presented by Louise Bickett and Mary Nances Austell. At this meeting, Sarah Escott and Helen Thompson will be initiated into the fraternity. Margaret and Jeanette Malloy will have charge of the social hour.

I. R. C.

The representatives of I. R. C. went to Winthrop College, December 9, to attend the "Model League of Nations," sponsored by the history department. Twelve delegates were sent from Queens-Chicora, this being the largest number present from any college. The ten colleges represented were as follows: Davidson, Wofford, P. C., Clemson, Columbia Bible School, G. W. C., University of North Carolina, University of South Carolina, Wake Forest, and Queens-Chicora. Janet Robinson represented France and spoke on "Minorities in Germany." The delegates from Queens-Chicora were: Florence Moffett, Janet Robinson, Mary Louise Boate, Claudia McClesney, Katherine McKlesky, Edith Reid Ramseur, Ruth Freeman, Jessie Pierson, Jane Bradley, Sarah Robinson, Mary Moffett, and Mr. Kennedy.

Gamma Sigma and Phi Delta

The two literary societies are sponsoring the Little Theatre in Dickens' Christmas Carol" Tuesday night, December 19. There will be no admission charge.

Home Economics Club

The Home Economics Club met in the Practice House. Their guest was Miss Rena Harrell, who made an interesting talk on "European Food." A short business session followed, after which delightful refreshments were served.

People You Know

The Thanksgiving holidays brought Lula Hall back from Raeford and with her that K. A. pin. It surely must be great, 'cause she couldn't even eat oysters!

Katherine Shellem goes to Denver when it has only been a week since she was there. There is really an attraction more than gravity!

As usual Bunny Reid came back two days late from Batesburg and everyone seemed really glad to see her.

When Thursday of holidays came Francis Norris and Mary Du McMullen couldn't stand it, so they pulled out for Davidson. Reported a good time, too.

Rebecca McClary thought surely she'd be ready for school by Wednesday, but no; those tonsils were just a little too bad! We miss you, Beck.

Grace Weatherly had the flu so she couldn't get back until Wednesday. Tough luck, and just during the holidays.

Gee, but that house party Nancy Redfern and Ann West went on up at Montreat was certainly swell! Hmm!

Mary Wilson surely showed a guilty face Monday after the house party in South Carolina! "Fess up" Mary!

Elizabeth Cassels spent Thanksgiving in Columbia, S. C., visiting Eleanor Woodcock! Fun and more fun!

Jean Stough says she thinks she'll go home this week end. Oh, well! Cornelius is only 15 miles away! A nice drive for someone!

Betty Manning spent the week end in Columbia, S. C. She rather rates, too, eh!

It is needless to say that we know everyone on the campus, and that practically everyone went home for Thanksgiving and in a few days are going home for Christmas! So that's that!

Mathematics Club

The Mathematics Club met on Thursday, December 14, at the home of Mary Louise Boate, on Victoria Avenue. Miss Alma Orr also acted as hostess to the club. After a short business meeting at which the president, Miss Alma Orr presided, the evening was given over to games and contests.
