

Dr. Goddard Announces Cut System

Strict Enforcement of Regulations Emphasized By Dean of Instruction

New regulations were posted recently governing class cuts. These new rules are far more liberal than the three-cut-per-semester-hour rules of last year; but Dr. Goddard, the Dean of Instruction, emphasizes the fact that they will be strictly enforced. The following is a list of the new regulations for class cuts:

I. One voluntary cut per semester hour.

(a) Freshman not allowed voluntary cuts during first quarter, but they may have one cut per course the second quarter if grades are satisfactory the first quarter.

(b) No voluntary cuts in any course are allowed students who have been reported as failing for the previous quarter.

(c) If the failure is removed the first quarter of a semester, one cut per course will be allowed the second quarter.

(d) Three tardies will count as a voluntary cut.

(e) Infraction of these rules will result in indefinite suspension from the class in which excess voluntary cuts were taken.

II. Two absences per semester hour for definite and excused illness.

(a) Excuses signed by physicians, parents, guardians, or college nurse.

(b) Excuses must be turned into Office of Instruction within one week after return to class.

III. Absences beyond three times of the number of semester hours will deduct from the total number of semester hours in a course, as follows:

(a) Absences amounting to more than three times the number of semester hours and to not more than four times the number of semester hours shall result in the deduction of one-third of the credit of that course.

(b) Absences amounting to more than four times the number of semester hours in a course shall automatically cancel credit for that course.

IV. A Dean's list of superior students will be published after each semester.

(a) Students on this list will not be subject to attendance regulations, with these exceptions:

(1) Dean's List students may not cut announced tests, except for definite and excused illnesses.

(2) Dean's List students may not cut classes which immediately precede or follow holidays.

(b) Any Dean's List student who is taken off the list may not be listed again during her college course.

V. (a) Absences, whether excused or voluntary, will count as double absences the two days prior to and immediately following holidays.

(b) Voluntary cuts from classes on days when announced tests have been scheduled shall count as double cuts.

VI. Laboratories. No cuts or shifts are permitted in the Department of Home Economics. In the case of other laboratories, one shift may be made, provided it is made up within the week of the shift. Additional shifts will be charged for. No cuts allowed.

VII. Recitation and lecture attendance may not be shifted.

Dr. Glasgow Speaks Here

Will Conduct Fall Service At Queens-Chicora College In November

Dr. Samuel McPheeters Glasgow will on November 18 and 19, conduct fall services at Queens-Chicora College.

Dr. Glasgow, former pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, Tennessee, and present pastor of Independent Presbyterian Church, Savannah, Georgia, is well known in the Presbyterian church throughout the entire South. He has written several expositions on different books of the Bible. Quite interesting is his gallery of Robert E. Lee. Dr. Glasgow is said to own the largest known collection of pictures of Lee. Having been a teacher of Bible at the annual conferences held at Davidson College, he is admired by students throughout the country. Dr. Glasgow is a brother of Mr. Tom Glasgow, prominent Charlotte citizen. This is not his first visit to the college. He conducted the fall services held here three years ago and was chosen to deliver the commencement address the following spring.

The plans for the meeting, although not yet complete will be something of the following nature: First service, Wednesday, at the chapel hour; Wednesday afternoon group conference; Wednesday evening, service in the auditorium; a similar program for Thursday with the concluding service being held on Thursday evening, November 19.

Civic Orchestra Presents Concert

On November 20, the Queens-Chicora civic orchestra will present its first concert. The orchestra under the direction of Don Richardson has made rapid progress since the first of the year. Mr. Richardson has this year accepted the position of violin instructor at Queens-Chicora. It is with great anticipation that the following members of the orchestra will be received in concert: Dorothy Carson, Ermine Waddell, Jean Dulin, Billy Richard, Sarah Hunsucker, Jack Jones, Rogers Mozell, Herbert Ninnis, Ruth Kilgo, Frances Westbrook, Clyda Gamble, Elinor Niven, Margaret Flowe, Carmalt Hartman, O. T. Polk, Willie Mae Cooper, Ruth Huffman, Mary Self, Billy Hough, C. B. Eford, Charles O'Kelly, Joe Beard.

Junior Class Entertainment Plans Made

The Glee Club of Duke University will present an entertainment on Wednesday evening, December 2. This entertainment, sponsored by the Junior Class, is to be the first class entertainment of the season. This glee club is one which is always popular, and this year the manager has promised an unusually attractive program. The Juniors do not know yet exactly what the program will include, however. When this glee club was here two years ago, they brought both the concert orchestra and Johnny Long's jazz orchestra.

MRS. AGNEW NEW
DEAN OF WOMEN

Charlotte Director Needlework Guild Announces Opening

The Charlotte Director of the Needle Work Guild, Mrs. Stuart Cramer, has announced the opening of the annual drive. The donations this year are requested to be in the form of wearing apparel for all ages and sizes. The articles must, however, be in duplication.

This year, for the first time, the Queens-Chicora girls are to have full charge of the drive. It has been the custom in the past for the faculty to have charge of the various groups. Each sorority and the S. C. A. have been asked to donate twenty matched gifts. A money gift is to accompany each donation.

The Needle Work Guild of America has been doing this charitable work since 1885. Thousands of needy persons throughout the United States have been cared for during this period of time.

Mrs. Booker, the Section Director, has requested that all donations be turned in by Monday, the twenty-sixth. In connection with the donations from the other divisions of the Guild, they will be displayed at the Woman's Club on October 29. Tea will be served and everyone is cordially invited.

Student Body Chooses Stunt Night Officers

The annual "Stunt Night" of Queens-Chicora College will be held on the Tuesday before Thanksgiving with all classes participating. Keen rivalry is expected because of the cup that awaits the victorious winner.

The Freshmen elected by popular vote as their chairman, Virginia Smith, and Anna D. Roberts, gallery chairman. Great things are expected of these two energetic Freshmen.

The Sophomores elected capable Frances O'Hair as its leader. To date their gallery chairman has not been appointed.

Jane Wiley was elected to serve the Junior class in the capacity of its chairman. Harriet Truesdale will act as its gallery chairman.

A committee composed of Dot Senn, Jane Ellen Taylor, and Loise Thompson will work out the Senior ideas for stunt night.

Plans are not complete in any class, but great things are expected, and each will strive to excel. Who will win no one knows.

Chapel Talk Of School Life

Dr. Goddard Gives Students Four Rules For Living Happily

At the regular chapel hour Thursday, Dr. J. M. Goddard addressed the student body in a very interesting talk on motives prompting the individual's behavior and the causes and solving of mental conflicts which might confront the college student.

Dr. Goddard, in speaking of college life said: "Life in college is no different from life outside of college, as far as adjustments are concerned." Under four main points he discussed understanding human nature, mental health and mental conflicts.

The first point was: "In order to understand human nature, one must understand the motives prompting the behavior of others." Dean Goddard warned the judgment of others' behavior on what it seems to be, rather than by the motive behind the behavior. The desire for attention, he said, is deep in human nature, and the individual may employ wholesome or unwholesome methods of gaining this attention. Much mental conflict arises in the transition from primitive to idealistic motives. The college student is urged to analyze her motives and be conscious of them, to value herself and think what she is striving for.

In his second point, Dr. Goddard stated that "mental health is determined by the ability of a person to resolve his mental conflicts." In the life of every student there is the constant problem of the primitive urge against the social urge, and conflicts between what has been taught and believed at home and what he is taught to face after leaving home to come to that new environment college.

The third point was stated as: "Mental adjustment depends upon the capacity to love," and Dr. Goddard quoted Kempf, famous psychopathologist, in saying: "In all my experience dealing with mentally maladjusted people, there were none who were not selfish or self centered." The person who has the capacity to become interested in things other than those which directly concern himself is most happy and is better adjusted.

The fourth and last point was: "There is only one kind of mind that is helpful and that mind is growing." The stagnated mind has no place in the world of today in its aim to develop mentally wholesome personalities. If a mind is not growing, there results an unhealthy and unhappy person.

Dr. Goddard's talk was not too psychologically technical to be enjoyed by faculty and students alike and we hope to have him talk to us again soon.

Frazer Vacations

Dr. Frazer is spending ten days vacation in his home town in Alabama, in Florida, and in Atlanta, working out a program for the Southern Association of Colleges for women. He will also attend the centennial celebration at Wellesly College, having been especially invited by the president of the institution.

If our president returns from Florida with too big a fish story the student body of Queens-Chicora will call his attention to it immediately.

A.A.U.W. to Open With A Banquet

Members of Queens Faculty Leaders; Miss Edwards, Pres.; Miss Inglis, Treas.

The local organization of the A. A. U. W. opened its 1936-1937 season with a banquet on Tuesday, October 13, at the Charlotte Hotel. Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, was the guest speaker; his subject being of general educational interest. About one hundred and twenty-five university and college women from Charlotte and surrounding vicinity attended the banquet.

The officers of the organization for this year are Miss Alma T. Edwards, president; Miss Marion L. Fraser, vice-president; Mrs. E. Lee Kohler, secretary; and Miss Mary Inglis, treasurer. Varied programs with outside speakers have been planned and the meetings will be held in the sorority houses on the campus of Queens-Chicora College.

Dr. Lucielle K. Delano, a member of the faculty of Queens-Chicora College, attended the international convention of the A. A. U. W. in Crakow, Holland, this past summer. Dr. Delano will make a report on this convention to the local organization at a meeting in November. The state convention of North Carolina will be held in Charlotte next April; and the national convention will be held this year in Savannah, Georgia.

The toy show which is conducted annually by the association at Ivey's Department Store will be conducted for three days this year as usual. The toys have already been purchased by the representatives of the A. A. U. W., and the representative of Ivey's. During the three days speakers will give talks on topics of interest to parents.

The A. A. U. W. has sponsored many lectures at Queens-Chicora College which have been of much interest to the students. The organization plans to sponsor more of these lectures this year.

Members of the A. A. U. W. are made up of graduates of such universities and colleges as are eligible.

Queens S.C.A. Plans To Send Delegates To Fall Conference

Queens plans to send four delegates to the fall conference of the State Student Christian Association which will meet November 7 and 8, at Flora McDonald College in Red Springs, North Carolina.

The following six colleges from the Synod of North Carolina will send delegates: Flora McDonald, Peace, Mitchell, Presbyterian Junior College, Davidson, and Queens-Chicora.

The theme of the conference is, "Making the Program of the Student Christian Association More Effective in the Colleges." Mr. A. R. Batchelor from Marion, N. C., will be the main speaker and will lead the discussion groups.

State Christian Association officers are: Lillian Cooper of Flora McDonald, president; Frances Query of Queens, first vice-president; Frank B. Moss, of Presbyterian Junior College, second vice-president; Jean Morrow of Peace, secretary and Margaret Thompson of Mitchell, treasurer.
