

Students Hear Mrs. Brown In Chapel

On Wednesday morning, November 4, Mrs. J. Thompson Brown, well known author and lecturer of Spartanburg, S. C., addressed the student body of Queens-Chicora College at the chapel services. Mrs. Brown, whose lectures have been heard in many schools, colleges, and clubs during the past ten years, is well fitted to speak on her chosen subjects, for she has spent her life in close touch with the scenes of Charleston and Williamsburg that she describes.

Mrs. Brown chose as her topic, "The Charm of Good Manners." In speaking of good manners, Mrs. Brown said that several things are essential. First, one must have the charm of the well-dressed. One does not have to dress expensively, but becomingly.

"The second essential," said Mrs. Brown, "is consideration for others. One should never forget the person who is next to him." The third requirement for good manners is an agreeable personality. All the world loves a genuine smile, and the person who wishes to be really charming must have a friendly smile.

In closing her talk, Mrs. Brown said that the real test for good manners is to be able to listen to others. The world's greatest "bores" are those who are all "I." Mrs. Brown's advice was: "Don't say 'I' and 'my,' say 'you' and 'yours.'" Everybody has something interesting in her personality.

Home Economics Club Presents Fashion Show

The Home Economics Club of Queens-Chicora College sponsored a fashion show on Wednesday night, November 4, in the college auditorium.

The fashion parade was presented in the form of a "Cinderella" skit. Louise Faircloth, who wrote the lines for the action, played the role of Cinderella, and Mary Montgomery took the part of Prince Charming. The three haughty sisters were Caroline Wearn, Martha Johnston, and Sally McDowell. Mary Wilson presented the lines of the skit. The other models were Elizabeth Gammon, Alice Wright Murphy, Catherine Martin, Eleanor Clayton, Thornburn Lillard, Helen Williams, Jean Orr, Nancy McIver, and Jane Wiley. The beautiful dresses and hats modeled by the girls of the Home Economics Club were selected from the newest fall and winter styles and were furnished by Lucielle's.

An additional feature of the entertainment was the presentation of a number of attractive prizes, donated by business firms of Charlotte.

Miss John Wright is president of the club.

and the one the average student uses is cramming, or waiting until the night before the test to start studying, then attempting to cram, in several consecutive hours what she has neglected to learn for daily lessons. When studying for these long periods of time we become bored and our minds do not function as well as they should.

The second and best method is studying a little every day before the test and for brief periods of time, thus giving our mind the chance to relax so that in the end we have really accomplished more.

Dr. Godard listed two reasons why students make low grades on tests. The first is wandering. When the student reads the question on the test, she may write pages on the subject but entirely evade the direct question to be answered. The second reason is that of interpreting the question incorrectly, thus answering a question which is not on the test at all.

Dr. Godard explained that tests are not only peculiar to school but they are a part of everyday life and that we must do all our tasks well so that we may pass our final test.

We are not in the habit of answering the phone every time it rings, but we do get quite a bit of copy that way. The other day we answered and a masculine voice said, "May I speak to Ophelia Lippard or Irene Gailes?" Sounds like a bit of two timing, girls, but you both were off the campus.

The Davidsonian beat us to some of our thunder. They share in the glory of having to purchase so many Physical Culture magazines. We are proud of Sara and of Henry's admiration.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)
"I think that the League of Nations is one of the world's best bets for peace, although I don't think it would be good for the United States to enter it now due to the uncertainty of the European powers." Dr. Anatole G. Mazon, new professor of history at Miami University, believes it would be better to stay in our own backyard.

"For speeds of over 40 miles an hour, get into the air for safety. I want to give only one statistic. Based on the average flying which the average person does in this country, you will be 128 years old before any accident occurs to you." Amelia Earhart Putnam, world's foremost aviatrix, really doubts whether the average Grinnell College student who heard her will last that long even on the average ground.

The books in the University of Minnesota's main library are valued at $2,150,601.
