Day Students Sell Dogs

The Day Student Council has approved and is now sponsoring a project for providing a hot lunch for the day students. In the past it has been difficult for the day students to secure an inexpensive hot lunch at the college. Many of the girls have resorted to going to Myers Park School for meals. This is inconvenient in bad weather, however. Two energetic day students, Bill Stout and Lib Isaacs have undertaken the task of preparing hot dogs for the students. They are working against adverse conditions in the inadequate kitchen of Blair Union. Any morning the delicious aroma of onions, sauerkraut, and weiners may be noticed in the building. These two girls cook the weiners and serve them with all the necessary accompaniments which make this popular food so delightful. Through their industriousness the craving for this favorite American delicacy is satisfied. This project is not operated for profit but merely as a service to the day students.

Third Term

The third term question is settled. Gracie Allen will run for it, having just thrown a new spring hat in the bull ring. Contrary to popular impression, Gracie will serve her third term in the White House, not in kindergarten.

Gracie's idea is to serve a third term first, and then when she gets around to her ninth year in the White House, she'll be running for her first term, and there's no tradition about that.

Miss Allen was nominated by her own political party, the Surprise

Elmer Davis B.S.I. Member

Butcher Baker Quick Watson
Elmer Davis, CBS news analyst, has just surprised everyone too, with the revelation of his membership in the Baker Street Irregulars. Irregular is the word for it, all right, because the society has met just twice in the last six years.

The president, or Gasogene, of the Baker Street Irregulars is Christopher Morley, famous novelist and essayist. He is called the Gasogene because that's the English name for a syphon (for mixing drinks) which Sherlock Holmes kept in his flat in Baker Street. This should give everything away: The Baker Street Irregulars devote their spare time to finding out things about Sherlock Holmes which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle neglected to mention, or just hinted at. The B. S. I. have just published a book of essays bringing to light certain hitherto unknown facts of Holmes' life: His financial situation, his American ancestry, his early boyhood. The book is titled 221B, which was the number of Holmes' residence on Baker Street.

Elmer Davis' essay deals with the love affairs of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. Sherlock didn't have any, according to Davis, but this is not true of Dr. Watson.

Party, founded by her uncle. The Surprise Party's platform is the essence of simplicity: A jack-in-the-box in every pot, and two exploding cigars in the garage.

Virginians
Fifty of the University of Virginia's most stalwart bassos, baritone, and tenors will travel to New York on March 1st when Virginia's Glee Club sings over a CBS network, 3:15 to 3:30. The Virginians' program will cover almost four hundred years of music in fifteen minutes, from Palestrina to Sibelius. The University of Virginia was founded by Thomas Jefferson, who wanted it to include a school of music. Music was considered sissy stuff in pioneer America, however, and the plan was shelved. The Glee Club was founded fifty-six years ago. Probably its most illustrious alumnus is John Powell, noted contemporary composer whose "Set of Three" was performed recently by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, also over Columbia.

Diamond Dust
With Easter vacation, looking as though it isn't ever going to come, this is the time to start talking about baseball, to boost the ailing spirit. The pitchers are shagging flies under a Florida sun, and radio stations are limbering up their announcers, for this year every baseball game in the major season will be broadcast play-by-play.

CBS stations are carrying all home games of nine of the big league teams: WABC-CBS, New York, will cover home games of the Giants and Yankees; WBBM-CBS, Chicago, will broadcast home games of the Cubs and White Sox, as will Mutual and NBC stations; WCAU-CBS, Philadelphia, handles home meetings of the Phillies and Athletics; WJSV, Washington, will broadcast the Senators' games; KMOX-CBS, St. Louis, will do the same for the Browns and Cardinals, as will KWK, an NBC station.

This is not to be construed as an invitation to spring fever. Just stick it on the mental filing hook till next summer; meanwhile keep remembering there isn't really so much difference between galoshes and beach sandals; they both get wet.
