

MacGregor Plans District N.E.B.A.

The district meeting of the National Educational Buyers' Association will be held jointly at Queens and Davidson Colleges, December 13 and 14. H. M. MacGregor, of Queens College and F. L. Jackson, of Davidson College, will be the hosts.

The Educational Buyers' Association is composed of the business managers of all the major colleges in the United States, and its purpose is to enable all members to buy goods directly from the factory. It is a non-profit co-operative organization, with national headquarters in New York City and is maintained by dues, which the members pay in proportion to the size of the college which they represent.

The E. B. A. holds district meetings each year, in addition to the national annual meet. Representatives of schools in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia will attend the convention at Queens and Davidson.

The general program to be followed is: a dinner at Queens College, Friday evening, December 13, followed by a musical program from the combined music departments of Queens and Davidson Colleges; a discussion group and open forum, Saturday morning, December 14, from 9:30 until 1:00.

S. W. Garret, Business Manager of Furman University, is chairman of the convention.

Thanksgiving week-end will hear the roar of "Rah Rah Rah" for both winning and losing teams instead of the "Gobble Gobble" that will be heard in most farm yards the day before. Some of the football teams have already closed their season but several big games remain to be played. Wake Forest meets South Carolina here in Charlotte on Thanksgiving day and the DEACONS are much favored over the weaker South Carolina team, fresh from a victory last week. The PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE Johnsonmen should be victorious over Oglethorpe in their last battle of the grid season. Also, I am banking on WASHINGTON AND LEE to defeat Maryland, and NEWBERRY should prove to High Point her unmistakable ability. There are two games that are rather questionable in my mind (aren't they all?) and so the outcome remains to be seen. First the traditional Duke-Pitt game should produce many thrills and, I hope, find the old BLUE DEVILS victors. Next The Citadel-Davidson toss up will find two greatly improved teams fighting for grid honors. I am hesitant to pick so may I leave it with the teams to decide for us?

Zinsser's "As I Remember Him"

As I Remember Him: The Biography of R. S.—Meaning Romantic Self—is not just another one of the "doctor books" which have flooded the reading public lately. Instead, it is a man's journal, which gives stimulating accounts of science and also expresses a great philosophy.

Hans Zinsser, a German-American Elizabethan (for such we believe he certainly may be called, as he is one of the most versatile twentieth-century men about whom we have heard and is definitely filled with the spirit of what he hopes will lead to a new Renaissance) has written in a biographical style his own autobiography. He claims to be editing the story of a friend's life, as the friend told it to him. In this way his remarks as editor enable him to criticize and comment, sometimes humorously, sometimes seriously, on the thoughts, mistakes, and events of his own life.

The life recorded is of a German-American. It is the life of a schoolboy, poet, teacher, interne, scientist, and philosopher. As you read, Zinsser takes you into Russia, Serbia, Japan, and China, where he lived to help others live.

This book, chosen by the Book-of-the-Month Club as June's outstanding book, is extremely interesting. It is one of our library's newer books and deservedly one of the most popular.

Miss Jean Orr, Assistant Dean, Graduate of Queens

"I'm having a wonderful time," remarked Miss Jean Orr, assistant to Dean Slaton, when asked about her work here at Queens. A former Queens student herself, Miss Orr has had many opportunities to observe campus life, and says that she has always been very much impressed with the close co-operation of students and faculty.

During her college days she was president of the student body, a member of S. C. A., Alpha Kappa

Gamma, and a representative of Queens in Who's Who. At the present time she is very much pleased with her work and says "Everyone is so willing to do everything, and I really love it here. Thanks for the grand welcome."

Miss Orr likes practically everyone and everything. There are only two things which upset her, and one of them is interviews (including this one). The other bane of her existence is this business of getting up in the morning . . . the very act of which makes her extremely unhappy.

She loves food in general, but has a particular liking for olives, Italian spaghetti, and oysters. Although a true Southern girl, Miss Orr enjoys such winter sports as skiing and sled-riding. Blue is her favorite color and "The Blue Danube" is her favorite musical piece. But above all these, she puts people, because she "loves people," and people love her.

Freshmen Cobinet Holds Open House

The freshman S. C. A. cabinet held open house at the hut recently for the faculty and freshman class.

A social hour was enjoyed, and during the time Dr. Calvin Linton and Rosemary Vincent rendered several piano selections.

The cabinet, the chairman of which is Judy Scholl of Charlotte, is a new organization on Queens campus this year and was formed to stimulate freshman interest in S. C. A. activities.
