State Of The Union

for necessary things and find that the sum is quite sufficient. All sorority dues, Church money, contributions to charity, clothes, money for necessities from the drugstore and grocery store, and train fare come extra from dear Daddy who is always complaining that his favorite and only daughter spends too much money. Imagine that! And me a Freshman in college, a woman of the world!

I guess my biggest gains have been made in social development. This, of course, is more important than anything for I must know how to behave in society. In order to broaden myself and improve my "party manners" I go without hesitation and with great anxiety to Friday night dinner for which we must wear our "church" clothes and then to after dinner coffee in Burwell afterwards. Here I have a marvelous time showing off new clothes and impressing classmates with manners I didn't have before I came to college. But in spite of propriety I must insist on putting cream and sugar in demitasse and using a knife and fork at the dinner table just isn't practical. One must learn that to survive one must get their firststist with one hand in the hash and the other grabbing a bottle of milk. Friday night coffee ends the festivities of the week of which it is the only one and the remainder of the week-end is spent meditating and studying.

My subjects I have mastered completely and look with assurance to the future when I can put it to practical use. My chemistry will help me immeasurably as a housewife. I can serve my guests Molotov cocktails before dinner or maybe even sulfuric acid and orange fixed in the old fashioned way with bitters of nitroglycerine. Never will I forget what I have learned. I'll remember to tell my children that Danny Boy was the "father of the Renaissance", or was it F. D. R.?

The extent of my acquirance of common sense consists in figuring out that what you think will be asked on a history test won't be and if all the lights in the dorm are suddenly not burning then they must be out.

My extensive education is not through, though. In addition to the afore mentioned bits of knowledge gained, I have learned that if the sign says "Don't Step On The Grass", one should step on the grass, and anywhere else it says don't, DO. Of course, now, you ask for some proof of this speedy flight from a child to a respective Phi Beta Kappa. Well, don't let my report card fool you. After all, what are a few Ds and Fs?

My inventory is completed with the statement that I "sho" have found out how much I don't know. I must now run along to greater conquests. The dinner bell is ringing.
