For A Safe Christmas

Here's a tip from the Department of Agriculture on how to reduce the fire hazard of your Christmas tree: stand it in water, from the time you get it home until you discard it after the holidays. That's the most practical, satisfactory and convenient method found so far for reducing the fire hazard and preventing needles from discoloring or falling. And if you haven't seen the very inexpensive stands that now include a bowl arrangement to hold water under the tree, it might be well to investigate them.

The place you select for your tree should be well away from stoves, radiators, and other sources of heat. When you smoke, keep away from the tree.

The tree should be well secured against falling by inconspicuous wires holding it against the wall. The tree should be so placed that standing or fallen, it cannot block a doorway which might be needed to escape from the room.

It is important that your Christmas lights be in good condition. A short circuit in worn wiring might be sufficient to start the tree burning. Sets bearing the label of Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., have been tested for fire hazard and pronounced safe by experts.

Christmas wrapping burns like tinder and should be removed as soon as possible. See that all wrappings go into the waste basket and that it is taken out and dumped in a covered metal barrel or incinerator as soon as it is filled.

Be careful of heat operated toys and new electrical gadgets.

Safety Council Meets

which was presented for the first time this year to the winner of the annual football game between Charles L. Coon high school and Rocky Mount high school. This handsome gold plated trophy which stands four feet high will become the permanent possession of the team which wins ten games in this annual grid classic.

"Yes," said the energetic and effervescent young salesman, "I'm a mind reader. I can tell exactly what you're thinking."

"In that case," said the purchasing agent, "I beg your pardon."

Wife: "My husband is becoming quite a musician"

Friend: "What does he play, the piano?"

Wife: "No, he goes out fit as a fiddle and come home tight as a drum."

You may drink like a fish while driving, provided you drink what the fish drinks!
