Devotional Thoughts

Bishop Jeremy Taylor in his book "Holy Living" made this comment: "Man hath but a short time here on earth, yet on that time, eternity depends". And how true it is! Think for a minute on this idea. Where did you come from? Of course, you came from God. He made you through your parents. You had no choice in the matter of being born or choosing your parents. You came into the world because God put you here and He put you here for a purpose. Where are you going? You are going into eternity. Life goes on beyond the grave forever and ever. Men from the very earliest times have believed this; that eternal living can be in the presence of God or Heaven. That is to say, a meaningful life with God, living with your best self forever, or that eternal living can be in the absence of God or Hell. That is to say, a meaningful life without God, living with your worst self and your worst habits, getting a little worse eternally.

What decides where you spend eternity? The use you make of your life here, of course. Not in being good, for salvation comes not from goodness but from the love of God's forgiveness of our sins poured out on the Cross, but the use we make in growing close to God. The use we make in asking God's forgiveness and God's love. The use we make of God's Grace made available through His Church. It is upon this use of our lives that our eternity depends. "Man hath but a short time here on earth, yet on that short time, eternity depends."

In America, many positions as company president have been filled through "Boy Wanted" advertisements.

The man with a closed mind does well to keep his mouth closed too.

Of all the evils that infest a state, a tyrant is the greatest; his sole will commands the laws, and lords it over them.—Euripides.

Working With Friends

Employment

Employees are hired through the Personnel Office. Before employment, applicants complete application blanks and are interviewed. (There are no restrictions to age of employees except in accordance with State and Federal labor laws.)

Before beginning your work, you must pass a physical examination, and you may be required to take aptitude tests. The purpose of both tests is to place you on the job for which you are best fitted.

You will be introduced to the foreman of the department in which you are to work. You will be thoroughly familiarized with the layout of your department. The foreman will assign an assistant to conduct you on a tour through the plant and arrange for you to meet the superintendent of your department. The assistant will also point out the location of rest rooms, cafeteria, first-aid room, and many other accommodations.

Wage Policy

The Shelton Looms has established a definite policy providing for the payment of the highest wages in its industry in the area in which it operates. This has been its policy since its start over ninety years ago and it will continue to be.

Pay-Day

Friday is the usual pay-day, although another day may be designated by the plant manager because of unusual circumstances. When this is done, a notice will be posted in due time. Your pay will be delivered to your department after noon. Your foreman will give you the details. You must present your time card in order to receive your pay. If you are absent and want someone else to collect your pay, be sure to send a written request signed by you. You will receive your pay on the Friday of the week following the one in which the work was completed. This gives the Payroll Department the necessary time to figure your earnings.

The Company is required to make a deduction for Social Security Old Age Benefits and to make a regular deduction according to your marital and dependency status, for the U. S. Treasury Department for income tax. You may request the Payroll Department to make bond deductions and deductions for other worthy causes.

Guests were greeted by the hostess and shown through the new home, after which games and contests were enjoyed by the group.

During the refreshment hour, guests were invited into the dining room, where a lovely arrangement of gladioli and asters centered the refreshment table.
