Goodbye To Lincoln High

By ALBERTA JONES

Parting is such sorrow and we hate to say goodbye;
 But the time has come for us to part with dear old Lincoln High;
 We will never forget our Principal who helped us along the way;
 And we will never forget our dear teachers who in our minds will always stay.

When we were in our freshman year high school to us was new;
 But when we became sophomores our knowledge swiftly grew;
 Last year when we were juniors we thought we were a cinch;
 But we really changed our minds after a few hard days in French.
 Our senior year sped so fast it was hard for us to believe
 That our four years were over and it was time for us to leave.

We worked hard to get this far and we wish to say to you, Freshman, sophomores, and juniors too;
 Work hard and true with patience and with strife
 And there you will in turn have a more successful life.
 Though after we had sorrows and sometimes we had tears
 We still had fun that we will cherish throughout the many years.

CAN IT BE POSSIBLE?

Chapter IV

By MARTHA NORWOOD

Delores runs desperately toward her guardians' car, unaware that the strange object which had landed in her backyard was moving rapidly without a sound right behind her. The very instant that Delores reached the car where her aunt and uncle sits stunned, a strange thing happens to the peculiar object. The sides of it changes into enormous fangs and quickly clutches Delores, her aunt and uncle and the car within its fangs and closes them up within its gruesome figure. Then a split second . . . and the object of weirdness and evil had turned to two of the same kind and size. Then they turn and continue down the highway toward Chapel Hill destroying everything in their path.

Meanwhile, the people in Chapel Hill are totally unaware of what is in store for them. To them it is simply another day. But the peace and quiet does not last for long because the air is soon filled with screams of horror. The monsters have evaded Chapel Hill and within a few minutes nothing is left of Chapel Hill except a few crumbling ruins.

They continue in their path of destruction on and on, increasing in number by the second until they reach California, a building falls over, there is a thundering crash and William P. Dangiell, one of America's foremost astrologist finds himself lying on the floor beside his bed wiping perspiration from his forehead. He rises quickly and walks to the window to see if he were dreaming or if it had all been real. "Everything looks okay outside" he remarked to himself. He then went over to his table where he had been recently studying maps of outer space. He spreads the maps out before him. They lay there on the map in their positions, Mars, Saturn, Pluto, and all the others. Mr. Dangiell stands looking at them wondering . . . are they inhabited? If so, how far advanced? Are they planning to invade the earth? If so, are they on their way here now?

So, on it goes, the one thought which constantly remains in the minds of our wise men of today—CAN IT BE POSSIBLE?

THE END.
