TIME TO STUDY

When studying is unpleasant for some students, it may be because they do not know how to study. Studying must be planned. You plan anything else. There are many good study habits that can be developed through practice. Here are a few:

1. Have a definite time and place to study. This means a quiet room. You will need the cooperation of other members of the family.

2. Be sure you are comfortable. The lighting should be good. Avoid lying down or slouching because this becomes tiresome.

3. Have all of your materials together before starting to study. This saves jumping up in order to secure writing paper or pencils, books, and other supplies.

4. Start to study at once. Tackle your least interesting assignments first.

5. Stay on the job. Don't interrupt your studying. Do this so that if these things interfere with your studying and make it difficult for you to get down to work again.

6. Review what you study. After completing each assignment, review in your mind the things you have studied. See whether you can give a summary of the main points you have learned. It is often advisable to write down main points in your notebook. This makes it possible to quickly review

Special Education

The ungraded class, under the instruction of Mr. Montgomery has strived diligently to work toward "Quality Education".

Although the class has been at Lincoln High School for only a short period, there is evidence of mental and social improvement.

The students have worked cooperatively and industrially to the satisfaction of the teacher.

7-1 Class Learning

Class 7-1 has been very much entertained by their science book and experiments.

The first unit was How To Become A Good Observer. In this we should be curious, alert in thinking, and watchful. We have made much progress by curiosity. We are learning to be alert in all ways and how to solve our own problems. By this we hope to make much progress as we go on in life.

The week before Fire Prevention Week, Captain Bald, the captain of the Chapel Hill Fire Department came to our class and discussed many ways to prevent fire and problems about fire which we did not know the answer.

We also took a trip to the University Water Plant and was told the many processes water has to go through before it is pure.

We are making and learning different kinds of weather signs. We hope that someday we will have the knowledge to become great scientist as George Washington Carver.

We hope that what he said will approve to other students of Lincoln High and help them and everyone to be more successful as they go on in life.
