

SEYMOUR JOHNSON FIELD'S NEW DENTAL CLINIC

LT. COL. JAMES L.F. IRWIN-head of Dental Clinic No. 1

T/Sgt. ARTHUR B. GROSSA is Col. Irwin's right hand man and heads all enlisted personnel of both Dental Clinics. Sgt. Grossa keeps all records of the work being done, and keeps the AM students biting with well kept teeth, by providing timely appointments for them.

This Clinic, co-operating with Dental Clinic No. II at the Station Hospital, provides the best of dental treatment for the soldiers, treatment which has never been available to many of them before. The knowledge and skill of the personnel and the modern equipment make this possible. Here the patient receives any type of dental treatment indicated - extractions of those aching and broken-down teeth, fillings, treatments of infected gums, and construction of dentures (China Clippers to you).

The personnel of Dental Clinic No. I are concentrating their efforts on students of the Technical School Squadron so that each man will be put in the best dental condition possible before leaving the Field for his new assignment upon graduation.

Officers and permanent party personnel will report to Dental Clinic No. II for treatment.

The men, who are to be patients will be notified by letters of appointment through the Squadron Commanding Officers, and are to report promptly at the appointed hour. Men who have tooth-aches or some other condition causing pain or needing immediate attention need not wait to be called but may report to their respective dispensaries on sick call. Those who are not in pain or in need of immediate treatment should not report but wait until called for, this being due to an insufficient Officer personnel at the present time. However, this condition should improve shortly.

It is the aim of the Dental Service of this field to render as much quality dental treatment for each man as possible. This will have a two-fold effect; it will make a better soldier of the individual while in the army and a better citizen of him after we win the war.

Here is the most "dreadful" room at the Dental Clinic, but once the boys get seated in the working chair, all fears vanish, and their worries of tooth-aches are gone with the buzz of the Dentist's drill. They are shown in the waiting room, reading and sleeping while orderlies check their charts.

After dredging the dental "chair" all morning, Pvt Stan K. Brock finds that it's not too bad after all, as Lt. Russell Ford and Ass't. Mildred Parrott do a painless job on a "bad" molar.
