Here's the weapon that pummeled Rommel till he yelled quits. It's the world-famous Bazooka gun that scored such a tremendous success in the African campaign. A rocket-like gun, the bazooka is really fired by two men, the aimer being shown above. Another man, called a "firer," loads the bomb-shaped projectile from the rear and then steps out of the way as the propellant flash speeds the deadly missile on its way. An explosive head guided by fins, the projectile hits its mark and explodes with shattering force. A good weapon to have on our side.

That's a "duck," fellows. It's not the kind you take pot shots in season, though. This happens to be a German or a Jap. Landing operations in Sicily, North Africa, and Italy, as well as action in the South Pacific area, have proved the worth of these amphibious vehicles. They're at home on land or sea.

To the left are two pictures we've been hoarding for weeks. The top one is a shot of "Baby", a pet squirrel of the 46th Training Wing, who eats with us, but old .45 shells and flap-grease (prefers Fowler Flap grease, too.)

Beneath "Baby" we see Cpl. Sam Talenfield of the 913th Guard Squadron, who lays claim to being the heftiest lad on the field—273 Gi pounds with his shoes on. Sort of a beat-up-looking bike, doncha think?

LIFE SAVERS . . . Little Hints That May Mean Your Life or Death

BEFORE STARTING on a night mission study the details of the area to be covered, in the daylight if possible, and from photographs and maps.

ALWAYS REMEMBER THAT when scouting close to the enemy at night, your best protection from observation is silent movement.

LEARN TO IDENTIFY and locate the direction of common noises made by troops in the field. The information a scout acquires and his security while on patrol often depends on his ability to interpret sounds.

"OWL EYES" WILL help increase the effectiveness of your night vision when scouting. Cupping your hands around your eyes enables you to focus better in the area you are observing.

A BLACKJACK, bayonet, trench knife, wood club, and a zarrote are the effective silent weapons of a scout's arsenal.

WHEN IT becomes necessary for a scout to kill he should do so quietly so as not to attract the attention of other enemy units.

LEARN TO DISTINGUISH between battle and chemical odors. Whenever there is any doubt, play safe and put on your gas mask.

DON'T ANSWER NATURE'S calls during a gas attack. Blister gases attack the tender sweaty portions of the body most easily.

THE BEST PROTECTION from a daylight air raid is to lie flat on the ground or in a ditch, shell hole or shadow and not move.

IF DETAILED ON lookout duty be sure to watch in every direction, especially that from which attacks are to be expected.
