AS SPRING COMES

A clean-up, paint-up campaign always adds to the beauty of a town and as Spring comes this year we trust that the Woman's club of this town will lend their influence to such a campaign here. Such a drive pays dividends in several directions.

It is primarily an individual call to citizens to show their appreciation for their community. We believe that such a move here will receive full support.

HOOVER, PRESIDENT

We fought him hard because we wanted his opponent to be the successful candidate, but the manda-tate of the people was otherwise, and on Monday, March 4, Herbert Hoover became president of the United States.

We hope and believe that Mr. Hoover will make a good president. We trust that prosperity and goodwill will reign. His inaugural address was to the point and seemed to be replete with wisdom.

We are delighted that he did not place Jardine and Dr. Works in his cabinet.
The acts of these men must have been an embarrassment during his campaign.

We have always admired Mr. Hoover. It was not a question of liking Caesar less, but of liking Rome better. We were willing to, and did, fight Hoover, the Republican candidate, but we have nothing but good-will to Hoover, president. May his reign be a happy and prosperous one.

Interest In Education Means Improvement

This increase of interest in education is much more significant than most people imagine. In addition to all that it may eventually mean for American culture, it means economic improvement in two definite ways. First, it means an increase in the productive power of our people and a consequent increase in the sum-total of our wealth; second, and of more significance, it means a wider or a less unequal diffusion of that wealth.
That a trained man can produce more than an untrained one goes without saying. Every time a man is trained for a useful career his power to contribute to national wealth is increased. The larger the proportion of our people we can manage to train for productive careers the larger the average and the total productivity of our people will become. Our natural resources are a fixed quantity; what we do

Baptism and the Lord's Supper

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 10.
Baptism and the Lord's Supper. Matt. 28: 19, 20; I Cor. 11: 23-29.

THE discussion of the Christian ordinances which are the theme of this lesson brings us very easily into the realm of acute controversies of the sort that in the main it has been our aim in this column to avoid.

Possibly even the merest comment on baptism and the Lord's Supper cannot be made without conflict with the strong convictions upon these matters held in some quarters.

The very terminology in use concerning them indicates the divergence of opinion and the intensity of feeling. Some churches, are what are called "close communion"—the principle of inclusion and exclusio or other professing Christians in the fellowship of a local church having to do with the nature and form of baptism. Other churches which do not speak of "close communion" hold very strict and particular views concerning the nature and significance of the Lord's Supper.

An Extreme

We have heard of the wife of a nonconformist missionary in the depths of Africa who wrote to the archbishop of Canterbury inquiring whether she would be committing sin in partaking of the communion with her husband and other nonconformist missionaries in the mission field. That is, perhaps, a very extreme instance, but it typifies the general attitude of a fairly large number of professing Christians toward those of churches and communions other than their own.

There are some general facts which may be emphasized with value. There is, first of all, the reminder that baptism was primarily not a Christian ordinance.
John the Baptist was a forerunner of Christ and Christianity, and the fact that he used baptism as a part of his method of propaganda and discipleship showed that it was a practice already in vogue before the time of Christ and to which Christ himself submitted.

The comment of Christ upon baptism in submitting to that rite is perhaps the most effective and significant that we have.
"This it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," said Jesus. He probably did not attach great importance to baptism as a form, but he did attach much importance to with them is the undetermined fact, depending upon what kind of people we become, and how intelligently and how vigorously we find out and develop our resources. What kind of people we are to be will depend largely upon our schools and what they do for us.—T. N. Carver,

Street Named For Aviator

A street on a new housing estate at Burnage, England, is to be named Paulhan Street after M. Paulhan, famous pioneer of aviation. Part of the estate includes a field in which M. Paulhan alighted in April, 1910, when he first flew from London to Manchester and won a $50,000 prize in a race.

it as an expression of fellowship and as a linking of his religious life with that of his age and with the religious life that had gone before. Such a spirit gives to formal observance a new meaning and reality.

In the supper in the upper room, which has become the historic founding of the Lord's Supper as observed in the church and to which Paul refers in the verses of our lesson, we find the true meaning of communion for Christians. There are some who have questioned whether Jesus intended to establish in that incident any formal ordinance at all.

Formal Expression

For the thoughtful disciple baptism is a serious thing. It is the formal and public expression of one's discipleship and of one's place in the company of those who believe in Jesus and who seek to embody his spirit in the world.

So also the partaking of the Lord's Supper is a solemn action, a time for heart searching and for the measuring of one's life by the standards of the sacrificial love of God in Christ and the privileges and blessings that divine grace bestows upon man.

The truth is that baptism and the Lord's Supper are what we make them in our own lives. They may mean to us very little, or they express for us all the worth of eternal values.

Tires for the new Ford are specially made to give long wear

WHEN the new Ford was designed, it was immediately apparent that a new tire would have to be made to match the car's performance. It was distinctly a new problem, for here was a car with quicker acceleration, greater speed and more braking efficiency than any car of similar size or weight.

Though the Ford tires are designated as 30 x 4.50, they have the resiliency and air space of much larger tires because of the drop center rim of the steel-spoke wheels.

For best results, the tires on the new Ford should be kept inflated to an air pressure of 35 pounds and checked regularly to insure this pressure all the time.
This is important. Low inflation breaks down the sidewalls of a tire. By causing overheating, it also destroys the rubber that acts as an insulation, with consequent separation of the cord.

So that every Ford owner might be assured of maximum tire mileage at the lowest cost, the Ford Motor Company devoted many months to research and experiment in conjunction with the leading tire manufacturers.

As a result, certain definite specifications were developed for tires for the new Ford. These specify cords of certain strength and texture, a large volume of tread and side-wall rubber, sturdy non-skid design, and reinforced plies for protection against bruise breaks—all the strong features of construction formerly considered for only the largest tires.

At the end of each 5000 miles, when you have the front wheels packed with grease, it is a good plan to have the wheel alignment checked. This will prevent premature wear.

Great care also was taken to secure the best riding qualities in connection with the transverse springs and the Houdaille shock absorbers.

When punctures come, as they will with any tire, you will find the Ford dealer particularly well-equipped to make repairs quickly and at small cost. See him, too, for replacements. Then you will be sure of getting tires built specially for the Ford car according to definite Ford specifications.
