THE WAR GOES ON AND SO MUST WE

Just a month ago, the "Cut-a-Cord of Pulpwood for Every Local Boy in Service." The response has been splendid, but it is too early to know whether the 1943 War Production requirements for military and essential civilian needs have been met.

Meanwhile, we cannot afford to halt or slow down on this vital war job any more than our boys in uniform quit after making an advance against the Nazis or Japs. The war is far from won, and materials and supplies made of pulpwood are still being shipped in great volume to our far-flung fighting fronts.

A few more weeks of 1943 remain. These can be turned into extra cords of pulpwood, none of which you may be sure will go to waste.

Our local boys on the battlefronts are speeding up their duties in every field of military operations. They face death or serious injury at every step of the treacherous war, while we on the home front enjoy comfort and security.

The least we can do is to make certain that some of them will suffer additional hardships because we have failed to provide them with food, medical supplies, ammunition, and equipment - all of which are made of, or packed in, pulpwood products. So, even if you have cut a cord of pulpwood for your local boy in service, cut another one.

Gift Information On Rationed Christmas Gifts

Raleigh, November 30th - Wartime food rationing restriction this year will not seriously hamper the distribution of gift baskets of food to needy families by charitable groups, since the Raleigh office of Price Administration has worked out a simple system for these groups to obtain rationed food, even though it will require ration points from the recipients.

The procedure for obtaining rationed food was revealed today by Theodore S. Johnson, district director of OPA, in a statement which stressed that OPA was reluctant to require surrender of points from gift recipients, but found it necessary in order to keep the rationing program on an even keel, without possible disruption by rationing or black market operators.

"We were not confronted with this problem last year," Johnson explained, "because major rationing of scarce food items did not begin until March 1943."

Briefly, here is the procedure which any charitable or civic group will follow in obtaining rationed foods for gift purposes:

First, they should estimate the needed quantities of rationed items such as so many dozen cases of vegetables. Having set up such an estimate, they should present those calculations to their local rationing board and apply for a certificate covering their "Allowable inventory," exactly in the same manner as a food merchant opens a retail store.

Rationing boards will issue coupons covering the anticipated purchases which may be made from any retail store. The organization will then exchange these "inventory" ration points for the food items.

If the gift baskets are prepared uniformly, with each containing the same foods of rationed food, Johnson suggested that it would be simple to tag each package with the notation "12 brown and 16 green points."

In any case, he said, it will be the duty of those making the distribution to collect the actual points value from the family ration books of the recipients. Those stamps will be turned in to the headquarters of the organization conducting the gift distribution which, in turn, will surrender them to the local rationing board from which the original "inventory points" were given.

"The procedure in winding up the ration arrangements, Johnson said, will be exactly the same as when a retail store goes out of business."

OPA officials attempted to anticipate all the questions that might arise under the gift basket distribution. Here are some of the answers:

A person may give away home processed foods which they have canned themselves up to 50 quarts without the surrender of points. They cannot give away commercially processed foods without the exchange of points.

Members of a church congregation or Sunday school may not pool their stamps individually to buy rationed foods and give the food away, point free.

They can, however, pool their stamps to buy processed foods if these are to be consumed at a common table.

Generally speaking, OPA explained, the same rules for the exchange of ration stamps which apply in retail stores will also apply in the distribution of gift packages.

NEST EGG
The farmer, who saves a nest egg of War Bonds, can hatch up something after the war is over.

HOGS
Many North Carolina farmers feel that the floor of $13.55 per hundredweight for hogs does not leave a satisfactory margin of profit, says H. L. Meacham, Extension marketing specialist at State College.

FOOD
Prevent canned foods from freezing, store them in a dry place, and keep them in the dark, advises Pauline E. Gordon, Extension specialist in home management and house furnishings at N. C. State College.

EVERGREENS
One of the best broadleafed evergreens for the eastern half of North Carolina is the Camellia, says L. G. McLean, horticulturist with the State College Extension Service.

CATTLE
There is an increasing interest in Shorthorn cattle in Pasquotank County and several bulls of this breed will be brought in from Buncombe and Haywood counties, reports L. I. Case of the State College Extension Service.
