

SMITHFIELD HIGH TIMES

I believe he's entering into his second childhood; he's buying a joke book written by his old classmate, Judy Laughter.

Notice! Beautician Dianne Creech is advertising her "Permanent Wave" hairdo's. Bobby Barbour, driver of her cosmetic wagon, is out drumming up business on 301.

There goes Doug Hobgood---salesman---Tide Salesman, that is. I'll follow him to his little white cottage. There is Betty McGowan Hobgood, his wife. She uses Tide, naturally, for removing lipstick stains from Doug's shirts.

Now up by your old school. I see Barbara Roberts. She's teaching second grade. What's this? Eleven A. M. and there goes Lucy Hill's five little ones. Oh well, their mother was always tardy, too. It's a good thing that they're not in Tommy Gardner's class; he's so strict about punctuality.

Wait! Is that Hubert Everett cutting the school grass? Oh, well, I guess he just needs the walking exercise.

And there in the Science Lab sits Harvey Ennis---still trying. There's Linda Culbreth also in the lab. She looks a little confused. Oh, she says things have never been the same since the gang left fourth period chemistry class.

Out on the street I see Jimmy George, Chief of Police. He's giving a ticket to Ray Watson! Such a pity and he the Industrial Arts teacher, too! He'll never finish Jerry Langdon's boat at this rate.

A new dressmaker has come to town. It is no other than Jean Stephenson, America's most distinguished tailor.

I see Susan Creech running into the Colonial Store with great alacrity. She certainly isn't the prejudiced one, by George!

The time is passing and the vision is growing dim. It seems that all are doing well, my Lord.
