Students Term Officials' Action An 'Affront'; Ask Changed Policy

Chapel Hill — Rising in protest to the outmoded pattern of segregation which their school officials are attempting to foist on five Negro students enrolled here, University of North Carolina students are asking the administration to reverse its intended policy of separating the Negro students from the rest of the student body at football games.

Nearly 14 student organizations at the University were expected to present a strongly worded resolution to Chancellor R. B. House here last this week asking removal of all this week's crimmation among University students.

UNC students were aroused to action when the five Negro law students, admitted to the University by a Federal Court order, were issued tickets to the UNC-N. C. State football game at Kenan Stadium Saturday, Sept. 29, which called for seats in section K, located behind the goal posts in the east end of the stadium and traditionally reserved for "colored." James R. Walker, one of the Negro law students, refused to accept the tickets and returned them to Chancellor House, requesting a regular student pass book. His request was subsequently refused by House who explained the administration policy as "extremely conservative" in dealing with the Negro students.

Attorney C. O. Pearson, one of the counsels who led the successful court fight to get Negroes admitted to the Law school, said that the NAACP will in all likelihood bring contempt proceedings against University officials for the action.

None of the five Negro students, all of whom were issued tickets to section K for the football game, attended the contest.

Apparently realizing better than their officials the worldwide significance of the attempt to segregate the Negro students, UNC students stated in their resolution that "the University has been singled out for special leadership . . . in the preservation of democratic ideals. Our President Gordon Gray, even now heads the Psychological Warfare Division . . . whose chief task is that of convincing all races of the world of the integrity of our democratic institutions and way of life."

Their president, Gray, out-of-town for two weeks at present, several times declined to comment on the issue earlier this week.

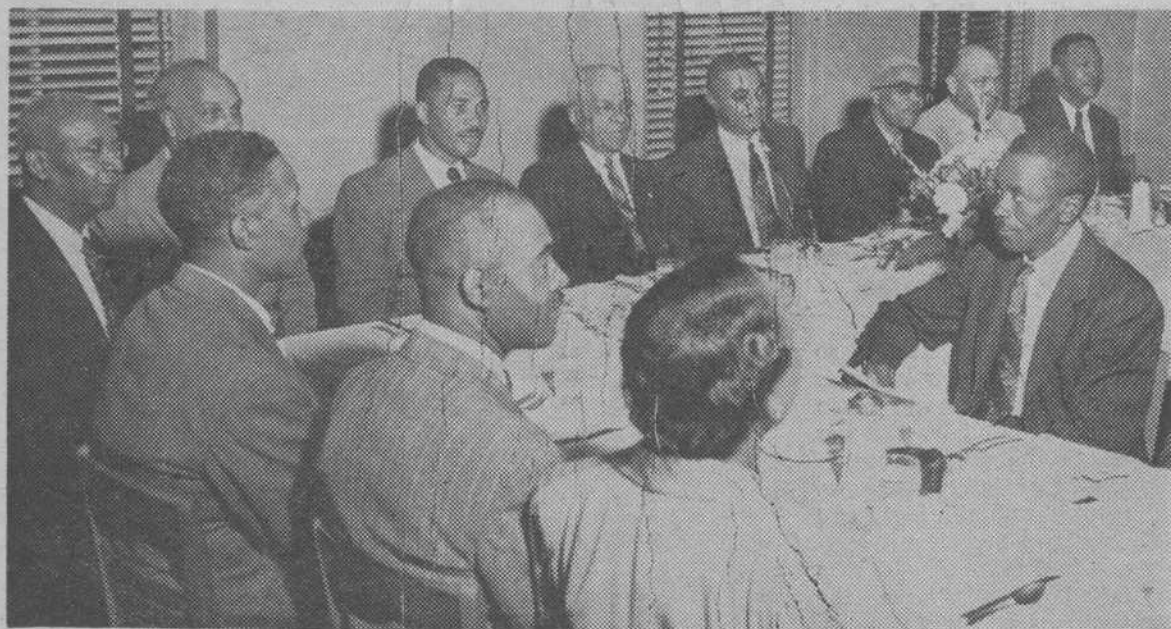

The resolution has been endorsed by the Student Legislature, the Baptist Student Union, Wesley Foundation, Interfaith Council, YWCA and YMCA. The Presbyterian Student Association, Monogram Club, Independent Co-eds Association and the Centenary Club has also condemned the administration policy.

In passing the resolution, the legislature termed the administration policy of segregation "an affront to every student in the University." It called on the administration "to respect the rights of every student with equal privileges and responsibilities for all."

Dublin, Ga. — A Negro farmer and his wife were badly beaten up in Johnson County Wednesday night by a band of white-robed men.

Uncle Sam To Probe Cicero Riot, Charges

New York — The NAACP today expressed gratification that the Justice Department has ordered an investigation into the Cicero riots.

"We commend Attorney-General J. Howard McGrath for his forthright action in ordering a probe into the Cicero case," NAACP Secretary Walter White said.

"We hope that proper action will be taken to correct the terrible wrong done by the indictment of NAACP Attorney George Leighton and the exoneration of the culprits responsible for the riots and destruction."

The NAACP has been urging federal intervention into the case since the Cook County grand jury investigating the disturbance failed to indict any of the rioters, and instead indicted the NAACP attorney representing the displaced Harvey E. Clark family. On September 21, White, Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall, and Attorneys W. Robert Ming and Frank Reeves presented the facts in the case to Justice Department officials and requested an investigation.

Leighton's indictment on a charge of conspiracy to incite riot and two other counts was vehemently hit by NAACP officials and others interested in the case. They charged that it resulted from his success in getting a federal court injunction to restrain Cicero police from preventing the Clarks from moving into their Cicero apartment.

and also his legal moves for a contempt citation against the police for violation of this injunction. Leighton also represents the Clarks in a $200,000 damage suit against the Township of Cicero.
