DEAR MS. CLEO:

Recently I have read many advertisements about "lucky jewelry". There is a necklace which grants wishes, one that assures you more money, one which will stop evil... why there is even one for gamblers!! Do you think there is really such a thing as a triple strength evil fighting necklace? I've spent time being mixed up, troubled and low on money and wonder if these work. Do you think it's silly to send away for this jewelry and give it a try?

Down on my luck

Dear Down:

Silly, hmmm, let's see... that's not quite the word I would have chosen. About the STUPIDEST WASTE OF MONEY I've ever heard of would be my choice of words. Does the jewelry come with instructions? Because if anyone is dumb enough to pay for this, they probably need help figuring out how to wear it. Take the money you were going to spend on this and apply it to your credit card bill. Then, take all your back issues of the Enquirer and immediately send them to the paper recycling bin at the landfill! Of course, you may want to hang on to the article about Robert the shaved ape that Osama adopted.

If you have any questions for Cleo write her at P.O. Box 1221 Statesville, NC 28687. There is no need to use your name unless you want to.
