Nine celebrities, including well-known coaches, race car drivers and even a member of last year's Carolina Panthers Super Bowl squad, participated in the Statesville Christian School Golf Tournament held May 11 at the Statesville Country Club.

Notables attending included Dan Reeves, former coach of the Atlanta Falcons; Bobby Richardson, former All Star second basemen of the New York Yankees; Bobby Lutz, coach of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte 49ers; Bobby Cremins, former Georgia Tech coach and TV commentator; Ned Jarret, retired NASCAR great; Steve Smith, wide-receiver for the Carolina Panthers; Ed Broyhill, politician; Neil McGeachy, athletic director at Lenoir-Rhyne University; and Jerry Moore, Appalachian State University football coach.

Thirty teams of golfers bid on the privilege of having one of the celebrities on their teams. Numerous corporate sponsors also contributed to the tournament's success.
