Please Note

According to modern ideas of sportsmanship, the important thing is to play the game, fairly and cleanly. Clipping, hacking, and cleating may be mere adaptations of gladiatorial tricks, but they should not be necessary today, when sports are not supposed to be life-and-death conflicts.

Teams play to please the spectators. Some spectators claim to be interested in good sportsmanship. Yet the interests of "good sportsmanship" never demanded the presence of an umpire, a field judge, a head linesman, and a host of minor officials at a football game, to insure that no one gets away with anything. If high school spectators want to keep on spectating, they are going to have to change their taste in methods of playing.

We would not have played Hillsboro in baseball this year if we could have entered the State championships in any other way. In all probability, we shall not play them next year if we can help it.

We have all seen what happened at basketball games last winter. At the present rate, CHHS and the other schools may soon have such feuds with one another that none will dare to play away from home.

It may seem to be a long way in the future, but we think that unless there is a change in attitude toward inter-scholastic athletic competition, we are eventually going to find ourselves without opponents or without official support for playing.

ADDED NOTES

We walked into English Class the other day and were discussing our writings with Miss Mancini. "Do you think we need more fire in our compositions," we asked Miss Mancini. "Just the opposite," she replied. . . . After defeating Hillsboro the other day, Coach Bud Stanbach has a new motto for the baseball team—"It's just got to be Dunn."

On entering the study hall the other day we noticed a little girl sitting at one of the tables, crying her eyes out. "What's wrong, little girl?" we asked, seeking to comfort her. The little girl looked up, and drying the tears from her eyes replied, "I'm the only girl in High School John Egbert didn't ask to the Proconian Party!" . . . And then there's the fellow in Mrs. MacKinney's choir who felt so dejected because he could get to first bass Latest reports lead us to believe that Houston Teague has become the leading candidate for the office of president of the student body. All we are saying is that as far as we can see it's not Teague himself, but his nose—That's not what some people think, of course. . . . Tourist folder just received: Come to cozy corners, the most peaceful place in the world. Here's a place where you can get away from all the noises and worries of life, including Rebekah Huggins. . . . An amazing accident happened the other day down at the Pre-Flight school. It seems that during the morning a car came speeding up the street toward the school, and, unable to check its speed, side-swiped one of the little guard houses, knocking it to the ground. Immediately a large crowd formed and as the Officer of the Day came rushing down from his office, the cadet who was on watch and in the house at the time of the accident crawled out of the wreckage and began to attempt to right the booth. At this point the O.D. rushed up and inquired as to what had happened. Immediately the Cadet snapped to attention. "Cadet John Jones, In command of Post One, sir," he said to the officer and then sizing the situation up in the words of a great quotation continued, "Booth crushed to earth will rise again." . . . And then there's the C. H. H. S. student who won't believe that George Cummins wasn't born on the First of April. . . . It happened the other day in the girls' fized class. The instructor was explaining to the girls how to play soccer. "Now remember, girls, the object to the game is to either kick the ball or kick one of the opponents in the shins," said the coach, giving her last instructions. "Now where is that ball I brought out here." Suddenly the familiar voice of Bootsie Taylor piped up, "Never mind the ball. Let's get on with the game." . . . We went down to swimming practice the other day in order to get a look at "Casey's Clowns". All we could see was Waters, Waters, Waters. . . . When asked where he thought the major battle of the Third World War would be fought, a certain campus wit replied, "Down at the Chapel Hill bus station." . . . We have just finished reading the latest copy of the Crime Prevention Journal

My, my the new love affairs that have sprung forth due to the approaching Junior-Senior dance. Also we have found some other interesting love affairs.

Hilda Sharkey's torch singing really brought the boys out of their hiding places. We can mention quite a few but this isn't the time or the place.

Choir is quite interesting isn't it, Billy Basnight? Especially when Dot Hogan is sitting in front of you, and you discover that she didn't have a date for the Proconian Dance—A nice time was had by both of you—Eh what?

Sailors have always been known for their collection of pictures, haven't they Huggins? Especially Bob Scott Langely. That is a wonderful picture you had made for the annual isn't it?

New loves for the Junior-Senior are beginning to shine forth already—We hear from very reliable sources that David Sharpe is preparing to ask Carlyle Markham for the privilege of escorting her to the dance.

Rose Marie Green must have met a lot of service boys in her Saturday night rounds. Recently she wrote to several different boys in one night. These boys don't know that they are getting doubled-crossed, do they Rose?

What has happened to Johnny (Casanova) Gobble and his followers? It seems that they have decreased to almost nothing recently. Shouldn't you do something about it, Johnny?

Lately we have seen Preston Carroll and Venitah Sanders together quite a bit. "In spring a young mans fancy often turns to love". This is a very true saying in this case isn't it, Preston?

Wilda Andrews seemed to have quite a time at the Proconian Dance. What has happened to Frank, or does he know he's being two-timed?

and find that according to the newest surveys the greatest cause of suicide in America is—you guessed it—History contracts. . . .
