Separately Classified

STORM CENTER—The highly propagandistic nature of this controversial film (book burning, anti-communism, civil liberties) offers a warped, oversimplified and strongly emotional solution to a complex problem of American life. Its specious arguments tend seriously to be misleading and misrepresentative by reason of an inept and distorted presentation. NOTE:—A Separate Classification is given to certain films which, while not morally offensive, require some analysis and explanation as a protection to the uninformed against wrong interpretations and false conclusions.

PREVIEWS "TEN COMMANDMENTS" — His Eminence James Francis Cardinal McIntyre of Los Angeles chats with Cecil B. DeMille after viewing a "rough cut" version of DeMille's dramatization of the life of Moses, in "The Ten Commandments."

Cardinal McIntyre called it a great mission spectacularly conceived. It is expected that almost a billion people will see the motion picture production in its final form.

idea of the need of religion is still unsolved. Never before has any plan so deliberately and intentionally insulted and slighted the concept of a private religious school as a means of education worthy of state approval.

Within the past few years, many religious denominations have followed a pattern already in force in the Catholic Church in their desire to furnish what they, as religiously-minded, considered a better education for their children. Many religious denominations are strongly considering the practicality of their own church schools. If, by some whim of a local group, a public school is closed, the logical conclusion might be drawn that parents might wish to send their children to a church-sponsored school of their choice.

The support to be furnished by the state to individual pupils might even be an incentive for churches to step in and fill the gap left if a public school should be closed. The mastermind of the Pearsall Plan apparently foresaw that this might occur and what might have been an important aid to the founding of church schools was immediately forestalled.

If a public school be closed, the State will aid in the education of pupils affected by individual financial grants in the neighborhood of one hundred thirty-five dollars per pupil per school year. The student must attend a private school approved by the State in order to be worthy of this grant; this school, however, must not be a school run by a church group.

If ever there were a deliberately-planned insult to religion and church, this is it; still, this is the Plan voted into force by the citizens of North Carolina.

In voting for this Plan, the people plainly acknowledged that any denomination, even that to which they might belong, is incapable of running a school worthy of State support; it would seem to follow that this denomination is, therefore, incapable of teaching.

Any John Doe may start a private school and it may well be approved by the State, but not a religious denomination.

John Doe's school may participate in the State grant to the pupil, but not a religious school.

This, in a State that considers itself religious!

This is the Plan supposedly apropos, but we think it not so! God's blessings always and that is apropos!

where else except from the apostles.

And who, better than the apostles, should know what Christ did mean?

They were there. They could—and surely did—ask all the questions they might wish, as to what Jesus meant by these words.

We sometimes forget that very little of what passed between Jesus and His disciples is found in the Gospels.

It would take a tall stack of books to contain three years of conversation, of questions and answers, of teachings.
