Durham Carmelite Nuns Break Ground for New Monastery Location

DURHAM — The Carmelite Monastery, presently located within the city limits here, will be relocated in a beautiful wooded area on Mason Road out in Durham County. Sisters Marie and Elizabeth, accompanied by the priests of the city and friends of the laity, broke ground for construction at the new site on the recent occasion of the Feast of St. Teresa, October 15. The Saint is noted as one of the outstanding members in the history of the Carmelite Order.

The one-story brick structure will be constructed with the rule of the Carmelites in view. It will conform to the cloister by supplying a required enclosure, and the floor plan will be suited to the way of life of prayer and silence of special observance to the order. The natural setting is conducive for retreats and meditation.

The monastery, which will be built by George W. Kane, general contractor of Durham and Roxboro, will be located one-mile off the Roxboro Road and exactly 10-miles from the Church of the Immaculate Conception on West Chapel Hill Street. The chapel will be open to the public each day.

The new facility will accommodate a community of 20 persons, and completion is planned for next spring. Included in the number will be novitiate candidates.

The Sisters spend 8 hours daily in public prayer, with the remaining time given to other works of religion and their own maintenance.

Our Job

The WORKERS of the world will be the ones to construct a Christian civilization and rid the world of Communism. It is hopeless to expect a few leaders to force such a reconstruction from the top down — it must grow from the roots up.

Bishop's Letter Gives New Home-Nursing Nuns Welcome to Diocese

RALEIGH — A letter of welcome to the Little Sisters of the Assumption, as they are about to begin their first mission work in the Diocese of Raleigh, was sent to Sister M. Thomas at their New York City convent by Bishop Waters this week.

"The Catholics of North Carolina have heard of the wonderful work of the Sisters, how they do private nursing in the homes of Catholics and non-Catholics, and in a most generous way do not charge for their services but take care of the poor, depending upon the charity and generosity of the good people in the area," wrote the Bishop.

The nursing program to be conducted by the Sisters will be under the supervision of the Catholic Charities of the diocese. Monsignor Michael Begley, superintendent, is making arrangements for the Sisters' convent accommodation. At present he is preparing a center for them.

The date of the new community's arrival in the diocese will be announced shortly.

Christ King Statue To Complete Durham Church, Solemn Blessing Sunday

DURHAM — Sunday's observance of the Feast of Christ the King will have a special significance to Immaculate Conception parish here. All the parish societies will be present when the Rev. Charles J. O'Connor, pastor, solemnly blesses a new statue of Christ the King, the details of which the priest supervised when he was a student in Rome last year.

The statue is one of a pair which the pastor brought home with him a month and a half ago. The other statue is a Holy Family group of new devotional design. Both were executed in the studio of Prof. Nicola Cataudela, first professor of sculptor at the Academy of Fine Arts, Rome.

The statue completes the furnishing of the Christ the King altar, located on the Epistle side of the new parish church. It is carved of Linden wood, natural finish and was six months in the making.

Donors of the statue are Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Wainscott of Durham, who gave it in memory of their father, William J. Cassady, Sr.

A solemn procession will precede the blessing in which the youth organizations of the parish school will participate.

Future of Nation Is Youth's Charge, Says Bishop's Resolution

RALEIGH — The spotlight of diocesan attention this week is focused on the importance of our Catholic Youth. The citation designating National Catholic Youth Week, October 27-November 3, was proclaimed by the Most Reverend Bishop in four resolutions submitted to the Rev. Charles B. McLaughlin of Rocky Mount, Diocesan Director of Youth activities.

The resolutions of the Bishop followed four considerations in designating the citation to youth. Because the future of the country depends upon youth for its security, and as these young people must develop character, patriotism and responsibility to carry out this trust, in addition to the fact that 7,000,000 Catholic youth will work together during this time on programs to insure these goals, and the theme for "Healthier, Happier, Happier" underscores their purpose for personal development and patriotism, the Bishop acknowledges the contributions made by the Catholic Youth Program and asks others to promote the activities.

The week will feature special programs in all parish grammar schools and regional high schools in the diocese.

The Bishop told a group of journalists of his admiration "for the intensity of the activity of the American people, an intensity which is mirrored in the development of the organizations and institutions which the 38 million Catholics of the United States have created."

He singled out two features of Catholic life in the United States which he said are particularly impressive: the constant and intelligent collaboration between laity and clergy, and the parochial school system.

The Catholic educational system in the United States, he said, "is a model of its kind and certainly constitutes the greatest security for the future of American Catholicism."

In answer to a question on the recent racial disturbances in Little Rock, Ark., Bishop Van Lierde stated that this is an extremely delicate question, especially for foreigners who are not completely familiar with the painful situation.

"The position of the Catholic Church on this matter is quite clear," he declared. "All men without distinction are sons of the same God and are therefore brothers."

"At the bottom of the matter, we can say that the racial problem in the United States is truly a national problem to which only time can bring a satisfactory solution, and which requires a great psychological sense and much patience on the part of the authorities."

Queen's Visit Cities Catholic Art, Priest

WASHINGTON—"Oh, here it is," exclaimed Queen Elizabeth II when she spotted William Blake's watercolor, "The Assumption of Our Lady," currently on exhibit at the National Gallery of Art here.

England's reigning monarch was touring a 200th birthday anniversary exhibit of 160 works of the famed English artist and poet when she discovered the picture.

She told the gallery's director, John Walker, that Blake's "Assumption" was her favorite among four Blake watercolors from her own Windsor Castle collection, that are part of the display.

The "Assumption" measures 16 by 10-and-a-half inches. It depicts Our Lady rising from a gothic tomb heavenward where the Christ child awaits her. It is executed in light tints of blue and warm ochres.
