

Unrest - A Sign of Life

SPOKANE, Wash. — (NC) — Unrest on Catholic college campuses will increase in the next few years but this will lead to a healthier concept of religion, an official of Gonzaga University told members of the Spokane Serra Club.

William J. McLoughlin, newly appointed director of student activities at Gonzaga, said that unrest is not necessarily unhealthy.

"On the contrary," McLoughlin said, "I believe that unrest shows an awareness and a viability and will produce a much more significant product of a more effective educational system."

"A generation ago we frequently disagreed with some aspects of the Church but it was unthinkable to speak out. We were, with few exceptions, a docile generation, good products of the system but less honest than we might often have wished."

McLoughlin said this is not true of the present generation. More and more they are speaking out.

They reject authoritarianism, want authority based on reason and question what appears irrelevant. The biggest single thing he found among college students today is the demand to be heard and to be allowed to participate in decisions affecting them. In the past the student was often denied rudimentary rights, found in civil due process of law. In the long run, there is a healthier approach to Christianity and is one founded on love rather than on law. What adults must be prepared to do is to listen and perhaps be prepared to learn with them."

Private Colleges Cost Double

CLEVELAND — (NC) — The cost of attending private colleges or universities in Ohio is more than twice that of publicly supported institutions. A survey conducted by the Cleveland Plain Dealer found that average tuition at private colleges will be $1,206 this year, compared to $448 at state supported schools.

Catholic institutions have been able to keep tuition lower than the average private college or university because many of the faculty members are members of religious communities who receive low salaries, it was reported.

Indoctrination vs. Education

SEATTLE, Wash. — (NC) — Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, director of the Institute for Philosophical Research in Chicago and associate editor of the Encyclopedia Britannica's Great Books of the Western World, gave the keynote address at Seattle University's fourth annual faculty conference, held here Sept. 16.

The eminent philosopher, educator and scholar spoke on "The Role of Dialectic in a Catholic Liberal Education."

"The student must be given a rounded picture of the controversies that have taken place on fundamental themes," Dr. Adler said. "He must be disciplined dialectically in the method of using his mind to explore issues and weigh all sides before he comes to the point of making a judgment on important questions."

"Anything less than this amounts to indoctrination in some degree, which is the very opposite of liberal education," he declared.

Mass At S.M.U.

DALLAS — (RNS) — Southern Methodist University is making available the chapel of its Perkins School of Theology for the celebration of Mass for Catholic students every Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

It is believed to be the first time Mass has been conducted regularly on the university campus. Previously Catholic students could attend Mass at the Newman Center, located in property rented by the Catholic student organization from the university.

But when SMU needed the building occupied by the Newman Center for dormitory space, the director of the center, Father Joseph W. Drew, was provided with office space in the Student Union Building. SMU facilities will be used for meetings and other activities of the Catholic students.

"It's really a better arrangement," Father Drew commented. He explained that at the Union "we are at the center of things and able to contribute more to the goals of the university." He said that attendance at Mass has doubled since services began in the theology school chapel.

Aim: Intellectual Formation Not Sanctification

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. — of the Catholic Church, Father Walsh asserted.

(NC) — In an age of unparalleled speed of change in education "the level of education which has recently undergone and will continue to undergo the most dramatic, even convulsive, change is higher education," declared Father Michael P. Walsh, S.J., president of Boston College, to the faculty at the formal opening of the academic year (Sept. 16).

The raison d'être of the Catholic college or university is not identical or coterminous with that of the Catholic Church, Father Walsh asserted.

"The direct purpose of the Catholic university as regards its students, therefore, is the civilization of intelligence, whereas the direct purpose of the sponsoring Church is the sanctification of its members," he said. He added that failure to make these distinctions causes confusion in the operation of Catholic institutions of higher learning and in the evaluation of their effectiveness.

Father Walsh said that moral and spiritual formation have an important part in the total education process, but cited Cardinal Newman's insistence that the primary purpose of a university is intellectual formation. "As Newman clearly stated, our business is to lead men to knowledge, not directly to forge men into apostles or saints," he declared.

He urged Catholic universities to prove that commitment and free inquiry can prosper together, and said that the Catholic university offers the most promising setting "for the viable interpenetration of the sacred and the secular."

Christians Unite

CHICAGO — (RNS) — Miss Charlotte Bunch of Washington, D.C., a 21-year-old Duke University graduate, was elected here as the first president of the newly-formed University Christian Movement (UCM).

A Methodist, she was named to a one-year term as the top elective officer of the UCM, which for the first time brings together Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox and Roman Catholic campus organizations. Students, meeting for the first time as the "University Christian Movement," listed military conscription as a current major issue on campuses and launched a detailed study of selective service questions.

All issues involved in the draft, the assembly said, "confront us as Christians with serious moral and theological questions which we must attempt to answer and then act upon if we are to be responsible."

Among other actions, the UCM passed a resolution deploring what it called the "brutal interference" with universities of Argentina by the new regime of Lt. Gen. Juan Carlos Onganía.

Muhlenberg Common Worship

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — (NC) — A Roman Catholic priest and a Lutheran minister launched a joint weekly service at Muhlenberg College here.

Father James E. Sweeney of the Cathedral of St. Catherine of Siena here and the Rev. Dr. David H. Bremer, chaplain at the Lutheran affiliated college, will conduct the service, described as the first of its kind in the nation.

Father Sweeney, advisor to the Newman Club, reported that the service consists of about 15 minutes of prayers for unity, based on the Chair of Unity Octave booklet, followed by a short discussion period. The plan arose from conversations between the two clergymen, and was approved by Bishop Joseph M. McShea of Allentown, and Erling N. Jensen, president of the college.
