Up-dated Science Class At Asheville Catholic Set By New Principal

Rev. Anthony J. Dougherty Oblate of St. Francis de Sales

ASHEVILLE — As the first quarter of the new school year will soon close with the issue of the first report card, so the Reverend Anthony J. Dougherty will conclude his first two months as principal of the Asheville Catholic High School here. The priest-educator is a member of a religious community known as Oblates of St. Francis de Sales. This community conducts many schools of secondary education in the eastern part of this country.

Father said that the school is presently experimenting with "a few new courses." One of them is a progressive handling of Physics and Earth Science.

Father Dougherty came here from Salesianum School, Wilmington, Delaware, where he was director of closed circuit education television. He received his M.A. at Catholic University in 1936 and was ordained in the following year.

RENEWAL PROGRAM

Los Angeles — (NC) — The Immaculate Heart Sisters of California announced a program of community renewal to "allow them to provide more meaningful service to the complex, changing world of 1967."

Says A 'Must'

Freedom and Authority in Church

WASHINGTON — Freedom and authority must exist simultaneously in the Church and be linked by "personal responsibility for the common good," Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle of Washington said here. He preached at Mass here commemorating the Year of Faith.

Cardinal O'Boyle told the congregation that the source of truth is found in revelation but the search for truth is a "continuing process."

In this search, he said, both authority and freedom are needed.

"Both are necessary to the healthy functioning of any society, especially the Church. They are also needed if we would learn the fullness of the truths of which the Church is custodian. For to attain a knowledge of truth, there must be both freedom to search for it and authority to define it clearly when it has been found."

The cardinal stressed, however, that there are limitations on freedom in the Church.

"One, of course, is where there is a dogmatic definition officially proclaimed by the Church in the field of faith and morals. The other limitation on freedom is the factor of prudence. Granted that every competent teacher of religion has the right to speculate on those matters which have not been clearly defined by the Church, nevertheless prudence and justice demand that his personal opinions do not damage the Church or scandalize the faithful."

Bishop Sheen:

Restore Seminarians

'Love Of The Cross'

VATICAN CITY — Bishop Fulton J. Sheen of Rochester, showing the same oratorical fire that made him America's best-known television preacher, urged upon the Synod of Bishops the need to restore love of the cross to today's seminarians.

Modern seminaries must find the cross, Bishop Sheen said, just as St. Helen did in the 4th century.

Bishop Sheen began by asserting that never in history has there been such a gap between the current generation of seminarians and preceding generations. Citing Pope Pius XII's prophecy that the human race would undergo more changes after World War II than the map of the world, Bishop Sheen said today's youth reaches puberty two years earlier than in the past. Thus the turbulent emotions of physical maturity hit young people before they are sufficiently mature in other ways to absorb the impact.
